I. Executive Summary

This report is the third in a series of joint staff reports, the first of which was released in 2012. Part I, released on July 31, 2012, described the role of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms, and Explosives (ATF) in Operation Fast and Furious. Part II, released on October 29, 2012, described the Department of Justice's (DOJ) role in approving the operation and failing to halt its tactics, both at the local level (U.S. Attorney's Office for the District of Arizona) and at the national level (Department of Justice headquarters in Washington, D.C., so-called "Main Justice"). This report, Part III, describes the Justice Department's response to the congressional investigation of Operation Fast and Furious primarily between the period from February 4, 2011 through the date of the House Oversight Committee subpoena, October 11, 2011. A subsequent report, Part IV, will further address the congressional investigation, but will examine the period after the House subpoena and through the date of contempt, June 28, 2012.

Initially, the principal focus of the investigation was on understanding Operation Fast and Furious itself. Specifically, the Committees sought to determine: (i) whether there was any malfeasance, abuse of authority, failed supervision, or violation of existing law, and (ii) whether the facts uncovered suggested the need for additions to, or modification of, existing federal laws.

In the course of that investigation, nearly six years ago, the Justice Department wrote to Congress and falsely denied that law enforcement officers allowed straw purchasers to buy firearms illegally in the United States and traffic them without being apprehended. On February 4, 2011, Assistant Attorney General Ron Weich signed a letter that claimed, "ATF makes every effort to interdict weapons that have been purchased illegally and prevent their transportation to Mexico."¹ Since that false denial, the Committees have investigated why the Department of Justice misled Congress and failed to correct its misrepresentation in a timely manner. Despite the Department's refusal to cooperate, the investigation developed with the cooperation of DOJ whistleblowers, and especially Acting ATF Director Melson's testimony on July 4, 2011. Although Director Melson testified that the Department deliberately sought to obstruct Congress, prior to the lengthy litigation with the Department in court, the Committees had scant access to most of the documents that corroborate his testimony and illustrate the Department's tactics in detail.

On October 11, 2011, the House Committee on Oversight and Government Reform issued a subpoena to Attorney General Eric Holder for documents related to Operation Fast and Furious. In response to a question about the subpoena during a press conference, Holder stated: "We'll look at the subpoenas. I'm sure we will undoubtedly comply with them."²

Holder, however, withheld thousands of key documents, and asked the President to assert executive privilege over all documents related to the Department's responses to questions from Congress about Fast and Furious. The President obliged and asserted the privilege, but the Department never produced a privilege log. On June 28, 2012, the U.S. House of Representatives voted to hold Holder in contempt of Congress and to authorize a lawsuit to obtain the withheld documents.

Pursuant to that litigation, in August 2014, a federal judge ordered the Justice Department to produce some of the documents to the Oversight Committee and to produce a privilege log for the withheld documents for which the Department was asserting executive privilege. The Department subsequently produced previously withheld documents without claiming any privilege, demonstrating that the Department had dishonestly claimed the executive privilege to hide documents from Congress and obstruct the investigation.

The produced documents showed Holder was significantly more involved in the response to Congress's investigation than had previously been understood. Many key documents are still being withheld, but the body of evidence available at this point is sufficiently robust to conclude that there are fundamental flaws in the Department's approach to responding to congressional requests for documents and information generally, and in the Department's tactics in dealing with questions about the Fast and Furious case in particular.

The new documents showed—for the first time—how Justice Department officials communicated about the congressional investigation, and specifically what they said. The communications occurred between the February 4, 2011 letter from Weich and October 11, 2011, when Chairman Issa issued the subpoena. The documents reveal a highly politicized climate at Main Justice, focused more on spin and obfuscation than getting the facts right or being transparent. These documents, along with those previously released related to the drafting of the February 4, 2011 letter from Weich, enabled the Committees to reconstruct a detailed timeline of the Justice Department's response to a significant and serious congressional investigation. This report presents that timeline, which illustrates how Justice Department officials calibrated the Department's responses to Congress, the media, and the family of slain Border Patrol Agent Brian Terry with the intent of limiting the amount of disclosed information as much as possible.

This report collects and presents key documents and communications generated in response to the congressional investigation of Fast and Furious. The key documents are reproduced in chronological order, with additional background information and other facts included for context. The report also describes four categories of deficiencies in the Justice Department's response to the Fast and Furious scandal. The documents and communications show:

- 1. Failure to provide answers for the Terry Family: Documents show the Department did not take care to make sure the Terry family received information and support. On the contrary, the Department appears to have viewed the Terry family as a public relations nuisance.

- 2. Failure to objectively gather the facts: The Department’s internal investigation of the allegations first raised by whistleblowers to Senator Grassley’s office was deeply flawed. Documents show senior officials at Main Justice conducted a cursory inquiry and accepted at face value the information they received from the ATF and the U.S. Attorney’s Office in Arizona—the very offices responsible for the misconduct.
- 3. Lack of respect for congressional oversight: The documents show senior Justice Department officials—including the Attorney General—had a disdain for the congressional oversight function. The tactics that staff in the Office of Legislative Affairs and elsewhere used to delay and withhold information from Congress are consistent with the tone set by the Department’s senior leaders.
- 4. The Department’s priority on politics and spin came from the Attorney General: The documents show Attorney General Holder was managing key aspects of the Department’s responses to Congress and to media inquiries rather than focusing on managing DOJ’s law enforcement components. The documents do not show the Attorney General devising a strategy to minimize the danger to public safety by tracking down more than 2,000 firearms that were lost along the southwest border, nor do they show the Attorney General coordinating assistance for the Terry family. Instead, the documents show that Holder spent a great deal of time considering the political implications of the various milestone events throughout 2011.

To date, the Department has failed to provide internal documents and communications between the October 12, 2011 subpoena and the Justice Department’s retraction of its letter to Senator Grassley on December 2, 2011. Questions remain about the Department’s response to the congressional investigation. For years, Attorneys General refused to produce key documents that would explain:

- Which DOJ officials were responsible for providing Congress with false information;
- How, when, and why the Department discovered that the February 4, 2011 letter was false;
- Why it took so long for the Department to withdraw the letter; and
- Why the Department continued to obstruct the Committee’s investigation in the interim.

Still, the documents that the Justice Department has produced to Congress show the Department’s approach to responding to congressional inquiries about its programs.

1. Failure to Provide Answers for the Terry Family

Late on the night of December 14, 2010, a U.S. Border Patrol Tactical Unit (BORTAC) encountered a “rip crew”—a group of armed bandits—in Peck Canyon, Rio Rico, Arizona, about 25 miles north of Nogales. A firefight ensued. Border Patrol Agent Brian Terry was hit by a single bullet. Shortly after midnight, Terry lost consciousness and died en route to the hospital, according to testimony from fellow agents on the scene. He was 40 years old.

Two AK-47 type assault rifles were recovered at the scene of Terry's murder and traced to Operation Fast and Furious. A straw purchaser with known connections to the Mexican drug cartels had purchased the firearms from a shop in Glendale, Arizona on January 16, 2010. ATF had been aware of the purchaser's connection to a straw purchasing ring since it conducted surveillance of him on November 25, 2009. However, pursuant to the Fast and Furious operational strategy, ATF agents took no actions to disrupt the straw purchase.

At the time of Terry's murder, officials at ATF, the U.S. Attorney's Office, and the Justice Department knew about the tactics forming the basis of Operation Fast and Furious. In fact, on December 15, 2010—the day after Terry's murder—ATF connected the firearms found at the murder scene to Operation Fast and Furious. But no one told the Terry family. Josephine Terry, Brian's mother, first heard about Operation Fast and Furious from reporters who started calling for her reaction.³

In the subsequent weeks and months, the Terry family searched for answers about Brian's murder. On February 8, 2011, Carolyn Terry, Brian's stepmother, emailed Senator Grassley's office and asked for help. She wrote:

It's hard to accept that our son was shot and murdered with a gun that was bought in the U.S. We have not had any contact from the Border Patrol or any other agents since returning home on the 22nd of [January]. Our calls are not returned. I truly feel that our son's death is a cover-up and they hope that we will go away. That will not happen. We want to know who allowed the sale of that gun that murdered our son. Any help will [be] appreciated. We are the victims of this case and we want some answers.⁴

Senator Grassley included that email in a letter to Attorney General Holder on February 9, 2011.⁵ Documents show Holder agreed with Senator Grassley that the Terry family deserved answers. According to an email from Gary Grindler, Holder's Chief of Staff, to Assistant Attorney General Lisa Monaco, Holder was "particularly concerned" about "the assertion that there has been no contact with the victim's family."⁶ Monaco replied: "It sounds like [D]ennis' office has been in contact with the family and that there are multiple factions in the family."⁷

However, officials in the U.S. Attorney's Office seemingly disregarded Holder's message that the Terry family deserved answers. Justice Department officials discussed the Terry family disrespectfully. For example, in a February 23, 2011 email, an official in the U.S. Attorney's Office for the District of Arizona referred to the family as "disgruntled."⁸ On March 10, 2011, U.S. Attorney Dennis Burke met in Michigan with various members of the Terry family and provided them with false information.⁹ According to the family, not only did Burke deny that the firearms recovered at the scene of Agent Terry’s murder were connected to Operation Fast and Furious, “he told them that the weapons found at Agent Terry’s murder scene were sold out of a Texas shop, not an Arizona shop.”¹⁰

Emails show that Burke and his colleagues deliberately limited the amount of truthful information to share with the Terry family, and made those determinations based on concerns about media coverage. Days after Burke’s meeting in Michigan, he and his colleagues in the U.S. Attorney’s Office were discussing their strategy for communicating with the Terry family. Assistant U.S. Attorney Jesse Figueroa emailed Burke and several others:

We are making a mistake by attempting to reason with the stepmother and the brother. Lisa and I have been dealing with them since the start of this case. . . . Stepmom is irrational and I firmly believe she and the brother enjoy being in the limelight. Whatever they are told will not change their irrationality and will just cause them to contact the news. If they learned about our hope for a wire I have no doubt that would have been on the news also. We should deal only with the intelligent side of the family¹¹

In June 2011, the Terry family was still searching for answers. Josephine Terry testified before the House Committee on Oversight and Government Reform on June 15, 2011. She told the Committee that most of what she knew about Brian’s murder and Operation Fast and Furious came from the media. She testified: “We haven’t really got anything direct—phone calls or nothing from anybody.”¹²

More than five years after Brian’s murder, the Terry family still wonders about key details of Operation Fast and Furious. Brian’s sister Michelle gave a statement to a media outlet on the fifth anniversary of her brother’s murder. She stated:

It has been 5 years since Brian was killed in the line of duty in the desert outside of Rio Rico, AZ. To date, only members of the foreign criminal element responsible for his death have been held accountable while members of the U.S. Government directly responsible for equipping them through Operation Fast and Furious have only been moved or promoted. Our family is dedicated to getting the answers that all of us as Americans deserve, as well as continuing to keep Brian’s legacy alive and in the forefront.¹³

The Justice Department's obstruction of Congress's investigation contributed to the Terry family's inability to find answers. The Department withheld information from Congress that would have answered many of the Terry family's key questions about Brian's murder.

2. Failure to Objectively Gather the Facts

On January 27, 2011, Senator Grassley wrote to the Justice Department expressing concern about alleged gunwalking in Operation Fast and Furious and its possible relationship to Terry's murder. The Justice Department responded to Senator Grassley's letter on February 4, 2011, and declared ATF never "knowingly allowed the sale of assault weapons to a straw purchaser who then transported them into Mexico" and "makes every effort to interdict weapons that have been purchased illegally and prevent their transportation to Mexico."¹⁴ The letter did not mention the firearms recovered at the murder scene of Agent Terry.

The statements made by the Justice Department on February 4, 2011, were blatantly false, and nearly ten months later, on December 2, 2011, the Justice Department finally admitted as much and formally withdrew the letter. Documents reveal a flawed internal investigation by the Justice Department, in which the Department allowed people with conflicts of interest to influence the investigation. Senior officials at Main Justice conducted a cursory inquiry, in which they failed to vet information they received from the very individuals whose conduct was at issue. The Justice Department repeatedly denied ATF allowed firearms to walk despite receiving contrary information from reliable sources.

The Office of the Deputy Attorney General (ODAG) coordinated the Justice Department's internal review. Rather than conduct an independent review, however, documents show ODAG deferred to the Criminal Division, the U.S. Attorney's Office for the District of Arizona, and ATF. All three of these entities had a major conflict of interest and had reason to be concerned about the negative portrayal of the operation and their involvement in it.¹⁵

Documents show that when the Justice Department sent the February 4, 2011 letter to Congress, Main Justice had received information directly conflicting with the statements they made in the letter. For example, a few days after Agent Terry's murder, on December 17, 2010, ODAG received a briefing paper indicating firearms recovered from the scene of the murder were linked to Operation Fast and Furious.¹⁶ Similarly, in early February 2011, the Deputy Director of ATF, William Hoover sent ODAG and DOJ's Office of Legislative Affairs (OLA) a memorandum describing a specific instance where ATF let firearms walk.¹⁷

Despite receiving this information, there is no evidence that ODAG thoroughly reviewed it before sending the February 4, 2011 letter to Congress. Instead, ODAG worked with Deputy Assistant Attorney General Jason Weinstein from the Criminal Division to gather information for the response, and Weinstein encouraged OLA to use strong language denying Senator Grassley's allegations.¹⁸ ODAG and OLA quickly got the letter to Congress out the door denying the whistleblower's allegations.

After the February 4 letter to Congress, the Justice Department continued to deny the operation had deadly consequences despite evidence to the contrary. Early in the review, Matthew Axelrod—who moved from the Criminal Division to ODAG to manage the Department's response to Congress—identified materials indicating firearms may have been allowed to walk during the operation. Further, ATF Acting Director Kenneth Melson highlighted for Axelrod specific sections of the wiretap applications that were concerning and were potential “land mine[s]” for the Criminal Division.¹⁹ Yet, on May 2, 2011, the Justice Department sent Senator Grassley a letter reaffirming its position that “ATF's Operation Fast and Furious did not knowingly permit straw buyers to take guns to Mexico.”²⁰

Officials closest to Operation Fast and Furious thwarted ODAG and OLA's attempts to provide complete and accurate responses to congressional inquiries. The Criminal Division had approved six wiretap applications for Operation Fast and Furious, each of which included details about the tactics that formed the basis of the operation. At least one of the applications “suggested there was probable cause to believe that straw purchasers were taking guns across the border.”²¹ Upon reviewing the wiretap applications, the DOJ Office of Inspector General (DOJ OIG) concluded: “We found that the affidavits described specific incidents that would suggest to a prosecutor who was focused on the question of investigative tactics that ATF was employing a strategy of not interdicting weapons or arresting known straw purchasers.”²²

Officials in the Criminal Division strongly encouraged ODAG and the Office of Attorney General to publicly assert that the Criminal Division does not approve of an investigation when it approves a wiretap application. Matthew Miller, head of DOJ's Office of Public Affairs, pushed back and told Assistant Attorney General Lanny Breuer, head of DOJ's Criminal Division: “I think people will accuse us of playing with semantics when we say that you did not authorize Fast and Furious, but they find out that CRM did authorize wiretaps. That's why I find the statement problematic and recommended against it, and why I don't want [the Office of Public Affairs] to say it.”²³ Ultimately, on May 4, 2011, the Justice Department issued a statement that did not mention Breuer and instead stated the operation was approved by the U.S. Attorney's Office for the District of Arizona.²⁴

It is difficult to understand why the Justice Department uncritically accepted and repeated the claims of the officials accused of wrongdoing without taking steps to gather and verify facts more objectively. Documents show ODAG recognized the need to uncover the truth. On February 10, 2011, Gary Grindler emailed Deputy Chief of Staff Monty Wilkinson stating, "ODAG needs to be pushing ATF on what took place here."²⁵ On February 23, 2011, Eric Holder told senior officials at Main Justice: "We need answers on this. Not defensive bs- real answers."²⁶

However, the Justice Department failed to uncover the truth or to provide accurate answers to the Terry family and Congress in a timely manner. The DOJ OIG reported that the Justice Department's internal inquiry was flawed. Regarding the February 4, 2011 letter to Senator Grassley, DOJ OIG stated:

[T]he Department is ultimately responsible for representations that it makes to Congress. . . . [A] poorly executed information gathering and drafting process and questionable judgments by Department officials contributed to the inclusion of inaccurate information in the February 4 letter, and therefore the Department shares responsibility for issuing an inaccurate letter with the component officials they relied upon for information.²⁷

The allegation in Sen. Grassley's January 27 letter that ATF had sanctioned the sale of hundreds of assault weapons contained the implication that among these weapons were two that may have been used in a firefight that resulted in the death of a federal law enforcement officer. We do not believe that the gravity of this allegation was met with an equally serious effort by the Department to determine whether ATF and the U.S. Attorney's Office had allowed the sale of hundreds of weapons to straw purchasers. This was particularly the case in this instance because the Department knew that hundreds of assault weapons had indeed been sold to straw purchasers during the Fast and Furious investigation and that two of those firearms had in fact been found at the scene of Agent Terry's murder.²⁸ components, deference to officials close to the activity at issue should be tempered by the recognition that those officials are also invested in a positive portrayal of the activity and their alleged involvement in it. As such, officials who should be knowledgeable and forthcoming about the activity may be inclined, perhaps even unintentionally, to shade or ignore unhelpful facts when providing information about their conduct to senior Department officials. This is particularly true where, as here, Congress seeks specific information concerning allegations of improper activities.²⁹

The DOJ OIG report highlighted how easy it was to detect the operation's problems once DOJ began really looking:

When Department and ATF officials began to closely review Operation Fast and Furious in March 2011, it did not take long for them to read the Title III affidavits and ROIs from the case and determine that there were questions that needed to be resolved about Operation Fast and Furious. By this time, based on what they were learning about Operation Fast and Furious and other ATF firearms investigations, senior officials, including Cole and Weich, began having doubts about some of the statements in the February 4 letter. Melson read the Title III affidavits on an airplane flight, and immediately raised concerns. Axelrod read most of the ROIs from the case over a weekend, and immediately asked questions of the U.S. Attorney's Office about potentially problematic investigative steps in Operation Fast and Furious.³⁰

Similarly, on August 4, 2011—six full months after DOJ's initial denial—Deputy Assistant Attorney General Weinstein expressed doubts about his initial assessment, emailing officials in the Office of the Attorney General:

Within the past month or so I've had the opportunity to review, for the first time, some of the reports from the case. Some of what I have seen in those reports . . . is in tension with what I was told during that February call with the USAO. . . . [A]t a minimum, based on the additional information I have now seen, I would not have reached the same conclusions as I did in that summary.³¹

3. Lack of Respect for Congressional Oversight

In April 2016—more than five years after the first congressional document request and four years since the first congressional subpoena for Fast and Furious documents—a federal judge ordered the Department of Justice to turn over documents to Congress relating to the Fast and Furious case. DOJ had withheld those documents for years by claiming executive privilege.

However, in this case where the judiciary compelled disclosure of such documents, the Committees were able to see the uncooperative, often obstructionist tactics employed by the Executive Branch.

Senator Grassley initially wrote to ATF Director Kenneth Melson on January 27, 2011, seeking information about whether ATF allowed firearms to be transported to Mexico. Upon receiving the letter, ATF officials emailed about their initial plan to “hide and punt” on the information requested.³² DOJ resisted briefing Grassley’s staffers.³³ DOJ officials also told ATF that Grassley’s “allegations are infuriating.”³⁴ Throughout Senator Grassley and Chairman Darrell Issa’s investigation, DOJ withheld documents and information. DOJ refused to provide documents voluntarily in response to a March 16, 2011 document request from Chairman Darrell Issa. Consequently, the Committee issued a subpoena for documents on March 30, 2011. DOJ officials discussed internally how to respond, with one official advising against suggesting that DOJ would “provide a ‘substantial’ number of documents.”³⁵ He clarified that DOJ would “provide only some and withhold a substantial number.”³⁶

One DOJ official apparently sought to interfere with Senator Grassley’s requests for information merely because he was a member of the minority party in the Senate at the time, writing: “I also am reluctant to empower Grassley’s attempt as [ranking minority member] to conduct oversight by organizing a briefing.”³⁷ In another email, a DOJ official wrote: “We are giving Chair Issa part of our story on the case (while saying we cannot answer all their questions)”³⁸ Meanwhile, in contrast to its refusal to voluntarily cooperate with the Republican minority in the Senate, DOJ invited cooperation with the Democrat minority in the House. For example, DOJ sought information from Ranking Member Cummings’ staff about potential contempt-related proceedings.³⁹

As the Committee’s investigation escalated, DOJ continued to limit the Committees’ access to information. In April, one DOJ official wrote in an email, “[W]e disagree with . . . offering Issa and Grassley a meeting with the AG at this relatively early stage of the oversight skirmish.”⁴⁰ That same official advised, “It seems unwise to telegraph additional concessions at this point.”⁴¹ In a May 30, 2011 email, a DOJ official wrote, “I do think it would be a mistake to allow [Senator Grassley staff’s] participation for free.”⁴² A similar mentality went on for months.⁴³ In a June 6, 2011 email, a DOJ official wrote, “If we have done our job right Grassley is feeling discomfort.”⁴⁴

When DOJ staff proposed simple accommodations to assist the Committees’ investigative efforts, they were rebuffed. On May 29, 2011, a DOJ official suggested producing some documents based on a Committee staff request, saying, “Seems to me that makes our insistence on a Chairman’s letter silly.”⁴⁵ Another official vetoed the idea, stating, “We accommodate chairmen, not committee staff.”⁴⁶

After ATF Acting Director Melson agreed to cooperate with the Committee’s investigation, DOJ’s position hardened further. On July 6, 2011, a DOJ legislative affairs official wrote, “I’d stay away from a representation that we’ll fully cooperate in the future.”⁴⁷ DOJ officials appeared to presume partisan control over Ranking Member Cummings’ staff and complained when it became difficult to coordinate behind the scenes to DOJ’s satisfaction. One DOJ official wrote, “[I]t isn’t easy to script the minority in this situation.”⁴⁸ The Attorney General encouraged his subordinates in response to news coverage of Fast and Furious: “Hit back HARD.”⁴⁹ By October 6, 2011, senior DOJ officials wrote, “Relationships with Hill are irrelevant now[.]”⁵⁰

Meanwhile, as described above, as early as March 2011, DOJ officials learned details making clear the information DOJ had provided Congress was false. Even when Deputy Assistant Attorney General Weinstein reversed his position on August 4, 2011, the Department waited four months before publicly reversing course. Only on December 2, 2011, did DOJ send a letter to Chairman Issa and Senator Grassley withdrawing its February 4, 2011 letter, citing inaccuracies in the letter.⁵¹ For at the four months prior, the Justice Department appears to have deliberately allowed a falsehood to Congress to stand.

4. Attorney General’s Priority on Politics and Spin

Documents obtained by Congress demonstrate the Department’s failure to adequately supervise field offices or to focus on fixing the problems brought to light in the controversy over Operation Fast and Furious. Instead, senior leaders of the Department, including Attorney General Eric Holder, were disproportionately fixated on countering the congressional investigation, massaging the media, and protecting the Department’s public image.

According to documents obtained by Congress, Holder was most active at times of heightened congressional scrutiny or media attention. Emails sent to the Attorney General regarding ongoing media and congressional matters ranged from the mundane to the strategic stonewalling of Congress. For example, on October 5, 2011, Matthew Miller, from DOJ Public Affairs, spectacularly missed the mark when criticizing others for failing to spin damaging documents to the press before turning them over to Congress. Miller wrote, “The whole point of the review is to find things like this and come up with plans for dealing with them.”⁵² Holder forwarded that email to his Chief of Staff, Gary Grindler, with the comment, “I agree.”⁵³ For Miller and Holder “the whole point” of gathering information about what happened was not to learn lessons for improvement or hold people accountable for failures, but rather to prepare for how to spin it to the press.

Holder frequently expressed his disdain for congressional scrutiny. For example, on April 15, 2011, the Attorney General wrote to his senior advisers: “Issa and his idiot cronies never gave a damn about this when all that was happening was that thousands of Mexicans were being killed with guns from our country. All they want to do—in reality—is cripple ATF and suck up to the gun lobby. Politics at its worst—maybe the media will get it.”⁵⁴ Holder was setting the tone from the top-down. Later in the year, Holder reiterated his disdain for Chairman Issa when he emailed his senior advisers in response to a news article citing Chairman Issa, “Why don’t we just answer this asshole by stating the facts and go on offense”⁵⁵

Much of the email correspondence from Holder obtained by Congress concerned preparation for and perception of congressional testimony and media articles. For example, in response to a Washington Post article about the joint Issa-Grassley report, Holder instructed his senior advisers to “[h]it back HARD.”⁵⁶ On an email chain regarding a Wall Street Journal article and the subject of the authorization of wiretaps, Holder cautioned his senior advisers: “[E]veryone get ready—this isn’t about facts.”⁵⁷

The matter was such a high priority for the Attorney General that on July 20, 2011, Chief of Staff Gary Grindler emailed Steven Reich and Tracy Schmalder, “The AG wants both of you to stick around after the 9:15 each day to discuss the status of the ATF matter.”⁵⁸

Holder also involved himself in the particulars of ATF Director Ken Melson’s resignation. In order to quell any speculation on the pending departure of Melson, the Attorney General emailed his senior advisers to instruct employees to “close the door to [Melson’s] office” so no one could see it was empty.⁵⁹ Holder was also concerned with the perception of coupling Melson’s departure with Dennis Burke’s resignation. Other U.S. Attorneys were upset that the two occurred at the same time. Holder explained to his senior advisers that “by doing it together we have a one day story where Ken is the lead and Dennis gets 2nd place treatment.”⁶⁰ Expressing more frustration with other U.S. Attorney reactions to Burke’s resignation, Holder emailed his Chief of Staff Gary Grindler later that night: “Some people can kiss my ass.”⁶¹

Holder’s focus on public relations rather than on understanding and fixing the problems that led to Fast and Furious impeded congressional oversight and created a hostile climate wherein the Department officials who were negotiating with the Committees were chilled from making routine accommodations. Without such accommodations and compromise, the scandal could only escalate, which eventually led to the Attorney General being held in contempt of Congress.

II. Findings

➤ III. Prologue

FINDING: In October 2010, senior Justice Department officials in Washington were aware that ATF had allowed firearms to “walk” in Operation Wide Receiver. At that time, those officials began to formulate a media strategy to minimize public scrutiny of that controversial tactic.

FINDING: Within hours of Agent Terry’s death, ATF and the U.S. Attorney’s Office in Arizona were aware that firearms found at the murder scene were connected to Operation Fast and Furious. That information was immediately communicated to Justice Department officials in Washington.

FINDING: Justice Department officials from Washington did not attend the press conference to announce indictments related to Fast and Furious because of public relations concerns arising from a desire to avoid tough questions about gunwalking and Agent Terry’s murder.

FINDING: Justice Department officials in Arizona were relieved no mention of Border Patrol Agent Brian Terry came up at a press conference announcing indictments from Operation Fast and Furious.

➤ IV. Initial Response to Congressional Investigation

FINDING: At the time ATF received Senator Grassley’s letter, ATF and Justice Department officials in Washington knew firearms walked into Mexico, and that there was a connection between those firearms and the Terry murder. Acting Director Melson initially sought permission from the Department of Justice to open up a line of communication with Senator Grassley and get answers for him. However, the Justice Department instead decided to stonewall Senator Grassley, and did not acknowledge the Fast and Furious connection to the Terry murder until August 31, 2011.

FINDING: The Justice Department did not take seriously Senator Grassley’s letter or the obligation to uncover the truth about Fast and Furious and the Terry murder, relying almost exclusively on information from the individuals accused of wrongdoing and failing to give credence to even departmental information conflicting with those individuals’ accounts.

FINDING: Documents and testimony show as of February 4, 2011, when the Justice Department wrote to Senator Grassley that “ATF makes every effort to interdict” firearms purchased by straws, Department officials in Washington had information that detailed at least one instance in Fast and Furious where ATF allowed firearms to walk.

➤ V. Post-February 4 Letter

1. Public Silence and Referral to Inspector General

FINDING: Only after Senator Grassley made clear he had obtained evidence through whistleblowers did some senior DOJ officials identify a need to independently evaluate ATF’s claims.

FINDING: Justice Department officials made a strategic decision to withhold specific answers about Fast and Furious and the Terry murder from Senator Grassley.

FINDING: The Justice Department did not reach out in a meaningful way to the Terry family to provide support and answers. In fact, Department officials who were tasked with that outreach were hostile to the Terry family’s pleas for answers, and even mocked the Terry family. The Terry family was only provided information the Justice Department intended to make public.

FINDING: The Justice Department’s internal investigation of Fast and Furious was deeply flawed. Despite instructions from Attorney General Holder to find “real answers,” Deputy Assistant Attorney General Jason Weinstein still took at face value the information provided by the U.S. Attorney’s Office in Arizona—the very officials who were the subjects of the investigation. Only five months after his review would Weinstein read the case reports for the first time and express doubts about his initial conclusions.

2. Whistleblowers Go Public

FINDING: It was not until whistleblowers went public with details about Fast and Furious in early March 2011 that the Justice Department started to seriously consider the implications of the tragic operation. Still, the Department mainly focused on responding to the media and public relations fallout from those revelations.

FINDING: When the possibility arose that the Mexican government would initiate its own investigation, an official in the Criminal Division proposed “disingenuously” relying on the Inspector General’s investigation to “shelve the Mexican inquiry.”

FINDING: As early as March 2011, Associate Deputy Attorney General Matt Axelrod discovered multiple examples of ATF failing to interdict firearms when probable cause existed to do so. When he raised this issue with the U.S. Attorney’s Office for the District of Arizona, they pointed to wiretap affidavits that included these facts, suggesting the Criminal Division at Main Justice sanctioned the strategy by approving the wiretap applications. While others at DOJ swiftly began reviewing the affidavits, no office at DOJ was willing to acknowledge its errors.

FINDING: Instead of reconsidering its position when a second ATF whistleblower went public with details about Fast and Furious, Justice Department officials circulated negative information about the whistleblower.

➤ VI. Congressional Subpoena for ATF

1. Deadline for Documents

FINDING: ATF Acting Director Kenneth Melson notified Main Justice officials that details in the wiretap applications approved by DOJ’s Criminal Division undermined the Department’s representations to Congress. However, the revelation took a back seat to DOJ’s maneuvering to avoid a congressional subpoena and frame public opinion and press coverage regarding the subpoena.

2. Response to Subpoena

FINDING: Paul Colborn, an official in the Justice Department’s Office of Legal Counsel, played a significant role in obstructing Congress’s oversight. Colborn advised against providing information to Senator Grassley and strategized to withhold information from Chairman Issa.

3. “It Remains Our Understanding”

FINDING: Even as it obtained further evidence of the flawed tactics of Operation Fast and Furious, the Justice Department continued to stonewall Congress’s oversight, responding only to the threat of Department nominees being held up by Congress.

FINDING: Despite the Justice Department having clear facts showing it had sent Congress incorrect information on February 4, 2011, the Department continued to view the situation as a mere “oversight skirmish” and doubled down on its denials to Congress.

4. Wiretap Applications

FINDING: Senior Justice Department officials, including the Attorney General, spent a great deal of time and energy to devising a strategy to square their desire to protect Assistant Attorney General Lanny Breuer from scrutiny with the fact that the Fast and Furious wiretaps, which detailed the reckless tactics that were used in the operation, were approved under Breuer’s name.

FINDING: Because of Main Justice’s approval of the wiretap applications, officials in the U.S. Attorney’s Office in Arizona, including U.S. Attorney Dennis Burke, perceived the Department’s public statement regarding approval for Fast and Furious as unfair to them.

➤ VII. Continued Obstruction

1. Blocking Witness Interviews

FINDING: Even after the Justice Department acknowledged Congress’s oversight had identified legitimate problems with Fast and Furious, throughout the summer of 2011 Justice Department officials continued to look for every opportunity to limit the information provided to Congress. The documents do not show those officials considering the legal risks the Department created for witnesses who were exposed to subpoenas because of the Department’s strategy.

2. Deputy Attorney General Cole’s Confirmation

FINDING: DOJ officials, including the Attorney General, carefully calculated which documents to release, and to whom. Officials sought to create the appearance that the Department was complying with the various congressional requests in exchange for getting nominations through the Senate, but undercut the efforts of those who worked to actually cooperate with Congress’s oversight.

➤ VII. Road to Subpoena for Justice Department

1. Melson Comes Forward

FINDING: After ATF Acting Director Kenneth Melson began cooperating with the congressional investigation, Justice Department officials worked furiously to undermine key elements of Melson's testimony while obtaining a full transcript of his interview.

2. Full Spin Mode

FINDING: In late July 2011, the Attorney General began receiving daily briefings about Fast and Furious, and Justice Department officials worked actively behind the scenes to influence Congress's investigation. For example, Assistant Attorney General for Legislative Affairs Ron Weich attempted to "script" the House Oversight Committee's Democrat staff and urged FBI legislative affairs official Stephen Kelly to provide less information to Senator Grassley's staff but to continue to talk to them "to gather intelligence."

FINDING: When a joint congressional staff report on Operation Fast and Furious highlighted the involvement of the Justice Department's Criminal Division and the U.S. Attorney's Office for the District of Arizona, the Department immediately launched an aggressive effort to counteract the report.

FINDING: Assistant Attorney General Weich continued to obstruct the flow of information to the Committees, chiding FBI legislative affairs official Stephen Kelly for even meeting with congressional staff before "we have our shared facts straight."

3. Failure to Correct Record

FINDING: Even after Assistant Deputy Attorney General Jason Weinstein notified the Attorney General's staff that his initial assessment of Operation Fast and Furious was incorrect, DOJ failed for four more months to correct its misrepresentation to Congress. Instead, Associate Deputy Attorney General Matt Axelrod urged ATF's congressional liaison to provide only "high level" statements, such as that the congressional investigation "has been a distraction."

FINDING: Attorney General Holder was heavily involved in the timing and public relations aspects of the removal of ATF Acting Director Melson, going so far as to order Melson's door be closed so as to avoid the information leaking that Melson had cleaned out his office over the weekend. Holder was especially concerned about avoiding the appearance that Melson was a "fall guy."

4. Revelation of Further Justice Department Role

FINDING: Department officials tried to divert attention towards a different ATF operation during the Bush administration—known as Operation Wide Receiver—to politicize the Fast and Furious investigation.

FINDING: The public revelation that Attorney General Holder received memoranda on Fast and Furious in July 2010 sent senior Justice Department leadership into a frenzy, with Holder ordering top Department officials to push back hard. In response, DOJ undertook an aggressive public relations campaign, recruiting law enforcement surrogates to defend Holder.

FINDING: Senior Justice Department leadership was irate that the Department's internal investigators had not leaked certain documents in a more strategic way to lessen their impact. Thereafter, Holder sought "intel" on the individuals criticizing him, from members of Congress to local sheriffs, even asking about the political affiliations of a group of sheriffs who called on him to resign.

➤ VII. Postscript: Missing Documents

FINDING: The Justice Department has failed to produce documents for the period from October 11, 2011, to June 28, 2012. These documents cover such key events as the Department's decision to send Assistant Attorney General Lanny Breuer to Congress to testify regarding his knowledge of gunwalking, contradicting Attorney General Holder's assertions that knowledge of the tactics "reache[d] into the upper levels of the Justice Department."

FINDING: The Justice Department has gone to great lengths to withhold the documents that show when the Department became aware of the problems with Fast and Furious and why it ultimately decided when it did to correct the falsehood it had provided to Congress. The Department refused to produce to Congress emails such as Weinstein's raising concerns about DOJ's position, eventually allowing Attorney General Holder to be held in contempt as a result.

III. Prologue

FINDING: In October 2010, senior Justice Department officials in Washington were aware that ATF had allowed firearms to “walk” in Operation Wide Receiver. At that time, those officials began to formulate a media strategy to minimize public scrutiny of that controversial tactic.

Part II of the Committees’ staff report detailed the work of the Department of Justice (DOJ) Criminal Division and its Gang Unit in prosecuting Operation Wide Receiver. In the fall of 2010, DOJ officials discussed a draft press release announcing indictments related to the operation.

On Sunday, October 17, 2010, Deputy Assistant Attorney General Jason Weinstein emailed James Trusty, Acting Chief of the DOJ Criminal Division Gang Unit, about whether Assistant Attorney General Breuer should participate in a press conference relating to Operation Fast and Furious, given the use of gunwalking in Operation Wide Receiver.⁶²

Thanks Laura - Jim, is this the case we discussed previously with ATF?

I did a quick look at the indictment - these people moved well over 200 weapons, right? Let's keep in touch on this one - its a good case but the only obstacle will be explaining why we let them continue to send guns to Mexico while we were investigating. I know that we have to make those calls all the time, but we'll just need to be ready to answer press questions on it.

How come we included the FFL's name in the indictment if we didn't want it out there? I ask only because we can assume if we issue a release and attach a copy of the indictment, it is going to be reported widely.

We'll need to wait to issue the release until after the IAs, where that info is release, if we include it in the release. The question will be of course - why didn't they stop the other 200+?

Well, legally, I have to include the name of the company/FFL in the indictment. Didn't know you attached a copy of the indictment to the release.

Do you want me to answer the question of why they didn't stop the other 200? If so, I will need to talk to you as opposed to putting in an e-mail. Altho, I can safely say that part of it has to do with not always knowing when the guns were going across the border, or how, or by whom—especially early on.

All,

Attached is a draft release on straw-purchaser case we discussed a few months ago with ATF I believe. Here's something - the IG released a report today that is highly critical of Project Gunrunner, for a number of reasons (here's a link: <http://www.justice.gov/oig/reports/ATF/e1101.pdf>) While I think this is a very good case, I'm wondering whether it's a good idea to announce a case where 200 guns were smuggled across the border on the same day a reporter came out saying ATF isn't doing a good job at stopping guns from crossing the border.

There are difficulties regardless of the report, but I think the overall importance of showing that we are bringing these types of cases would outweigh them, if it weren't for the IG report. I'm just not sure we'll actually end up getting good press, so much as giving legs and a specific, prescient example for the IG's report, unfair as it may be.

What do you think? (Clearly ATF has a vote too, but I want to have our recommendation first.)

“[T]wo of the guns recovered . . . come back to two of the defendants who will be charged in the Fast and Furious T3 case.”

ATF advised me just a few minutes ago that two of the guns recovered in Mexico in connection with the kidnapping/murder come back to two of the defendants who will be charged in the Fast and Furious T3 case. ATF provided this information to keep this office from being surprised by any official inquiry, not because they thought that it changed the posture of the case.

As to the status of the case, ATF has submitted a list of RC-5 defendants for charging in the first indictment and I am going through the reports and call transcripts to see if we can make charges against each of them. IRS is still reviewing the reports and business records for financial crimes and we are looking at money laundering charges which will assist in the forfeiture of non-firearms assets. ATF is also currently approaching some of the participants to see if they can develop them as cooperators which would improve the viability of some of the charges we are working on, particularly conspiracy to possess firearms in furtherance of a drug trafficking crime.

As the U.S. Attorney's Office in Arizona and Justice Department officials were weighing whether to publicize prosecutions related to Operation Fast and Furious, one of the guns that traced back to the operation was tied to the murder of U.S. Border Patrol Agent Brian Terry. Terry was an agent with the U.S. Border Patrol's Tactical Unit, known as BORTAC.

⁷⁹ Email from Dennis Burke to Patrick Cunningham (Dec. 14, 2010) [HOGR 003070].

Late on the night of December 14, 2010, Terry's BORTAC team encountered a "rip crew"—a group of armed bandits—in Peck Canyon, Rio Rico, Arizona, about 25 miles north of Nogales. According to a Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) affidavit:⁸⁰

On 12/14/2010, at approximately 11:15 pm, four United States Border Patrol Agents attempted to apprehend at least five suspected illegal aliens in Peck Canyon, which is located in Rio Rico, Arizona. One of the Border Patrol Agents, utilizing thermal binoculars, observed at least two of the suspected aliens carrying rifles. When the group of suspected aliens was near the Border Patrol Agents' location, at least one Border Patrol Agent identified himself as police and ordered the suspected aliens to drop their weapons. When the suspected aliens did not drop their weapons, two Border Patrol Agents deployed "less than lethal" bean bags at the suspected aliens. At this time, at least one of the suspected aliens fired at the Border Patrol Agents. Two Border Patrol Agents returned fire, one with his long gun, and one with his pistol.

In the ensuing firefight, one bullet hit Agent Terry.

Deputy Chief Richard A. Barlow provided the following information regarding the incident this morning that resulted in the death of an agent.

All Tucson Sector Employees,

It is with a heavy heart that I inform you of the death of Border Patrol Agent Brian A. Terry who was shot and killed during an encounter with armed subjects. Agent Terry was working in the "Peck Well" area near Rio Rico, Arizona when he was fatally injured.

During the encounter, one assailant was wounded and immediately taken into custody. Three additional suspects were apprehended shortly thereafter. Border Patrol agents are currently tracking a fifth suspect and I assure you that every effort will be expended to bring this remaining suspect into custody.

Agent Terry entered on duty with Academy Class 699 on July 23, 2007. He is survived by his parents and sister in Detroit, Michigan. Please keep Agent Terry and his family in your thoughts and prayers as they have made the ultimate sacrifice in service to our country.

This is a stark reminder of the realities we face in our mission to protect our borders and our communities. We will continue to stand firm in our commitment to that mission.

Second, you may recall that a CBP border agent was killed on Tuesday in a firefight in Arizona involving along the Mexican border. Two of the weapons recovered from the scene (AK-47 variants) have been linked to Jaime Avila Jr., a # straw firearms purchaser that ATF and USAO for Arizona have been investigating since November 2009 as part of its larger # Fast and Furious operation. (It is not clear if the shots that killed the CBP agent came from the weapons linked to Avila.) ATF agents, assisted by ICE, USMS, and Phoenix police, arrested Avila on Wednesday for falsification of ATF forms, and in a subsequent interview, he admitted to serving as a straw purchaser. The attached background papers, which ATF prepared, provide additional details on the case, if you are interested.

The attached briefing paper read, in part:⁹⁴

“[F]irearms were in ATF’s . . . Suspect Gun Database due to their association to . . . ‘Fast and Furious’”

In addition and during the search of the area two RomArm/Cugir, Model GP WASR 10.7 62x39mm AK-47 rifles, serial numbers 1983AH3977 and 1971CZ3775 were recovered near the scene of the shooting. An Urgent firearms trace requested by ATF agents on-scene determined that these firearms were in ATF’s National Tracing Center’s Suspect Gun Database due to their association to an ATF led OCDETF investigation out the Phoenix OCDETF Strike Force. This investigation, entitled “Fast and Furious”, due to the very quick manner in which a complex firearms trafficking organization acquired several hundred firearms was initiated in October 2009 and is being conducted in conjunction with ICE/HSI, IRS, DEA and the Phoenix Police Department.

“Avila . . . is one of [] straw firearms purchasers identified . . . and recommended . . . for prosecution”

Due to the “hit” in the Suspect Gun Database the Phoenix Field Division’s Field Intelligence Group was notified and confirmed that the two recovered firearms were part of a sale of three Romarm/Cugir AK-47 variant rifles purchased by Jaime AVILA Jr. on January 16, 2010 from ██████████ in ██████████ Arizona. Jaime Avila Jr. is one of ██████ straw firearms purchasers identified in the “Fast and Furious” investigation and recommended by ATF for prosecution to the U S Attorney’s Office in Phoenix, Arizona.

Jaime Avila Jr. is known to have purchased a total of 52 firearms beginning in late November 2009 and ending in mid-June 2010. He had purchased 13 firearms by the time he purchased the three AK-47 variant rifles on January 16, 2010, two of which were recovered near Rio Rico, Arizona on December 16th. The 52 firearms purchased by Jaime Avila Jr. included 17 AK-47 variant rifles, 11 Fabrique National “FN57” 5.7x28mm pistols, 10 9mm pistols, 5 .45 and .40 caliber pistols, 2 Barrett .50 caliber rifles and several other assorted firearms.

Mike and Emory: please speak with Jesse Figueroa regarding the connection of one defendant in our Fast and Furious case to the Terry murder case so that Jesse is aware of our press conference on Tuesday. As I understand it we plan to make no connections between the two cases in our public statements and hope to obtain our defendant's cooperation as to how the firearms went from him to Southern Arizona. “Is this the one . . . where we inherited it after a lot of guns had been permitted to walk . . . ?”

Do I recall correctly that the case we’re unsealing along with Fast & Furious is 8 defendants? Is this the one we made with the RC 5 FFL, where we inherited it after a lot of guns had been permitted to walk, or was this a proactive case?

As for F&F, do you know how many defs they’re indicting? Are they confirmed that they’re doing a press conference? Did we decide to send someone, possibly in connection with trip to Vegas for the trial? If not, will we do a press release?

OK, that’s all. Thanks.

According to the DOJ OIG report, he told them: “I remembered, I wasn’t an amnesiac, I remembered that there was a case called Wide Receiver in which guns walked which I had reacted very strongly earlier and brought to ATF’s attention. But I was so focused on the Fast and Furious allegations and the insistence by the people that did the case that they weren’t, this wasn’t a gun walking case and I had viewed Wide Receiver as just ancient and aberrant. I just didn’t think about Wide Receiver as we were responding to this.” DOJ OIG report at 348. The OIG concluded: “We were not persuaded by Weinstein’s assertion that Operation Wide Receiver was properly viewed as an ‘aberration’ that had no relevance to the allegations.” DOJ OIG report at 412, 466.

“We will be a part of the press release because of the 8 defendant case being connected to F&F”

Yes it's the 8 defendants. This is not the one with the original [REDACTED] FFL. This case was fairly reactive, and the good news is there is no information suggesting that law enforcement let guns walk (it's conceivable that the bad guys did more, but it's not like it was on our watch). F&F, last I knew, was about 15 defendants. Sweeney may have more updated info. They are definitely doing a press conference tomorrow. We will be a part of the press release because of the 8 defendant case being connected to F&F, and we anticipate that Laura Gwinn will be a part of the F&F prosecution, although she's been more of a consult up til this point. I talked with their 1st Assistant late last week and he was already assuming she'd be at trial table for F&F.

We decided not to scramble out to this press conference. If you feel strongly, let me know and I'll hop a plane tonight. Jaffe is hitting Pittsburgh tomorrow through Thursday for more proffers, plea negotiations, and guilty pleas.

IV. Initial Response to Congressional Inquiry

FINDING: At the time ATF received Senator Grassley's letter, ATF and Justice Department officials in Washington knew firearms walked into Mexico, and that there was a connection between those firearms and the Terry murder. Acting Director Melson initially sought permission from the Department of Justice to open up a line of communication with Senator Grassley and get answers for him. However, the Justice Department instead decided to stonewall Senator Grassley, and did not acknowledge the Fast and Furious connection to the Terry murder until August 31, 2011.

On Thursday, January 27, 2011, Senator Grassley wrote to ATF Acting Director Melson requesting information about operations involving firearms sales to straw purchasers, and connections between those firearms and the Terry's murder.¹¹⁴ The letter stated:

Members of the Judiciary Committee have received numerous allegations that the ATF sanctioned the sale of hundreds of assault weapons to suspected straw purchasers, who then allegedly transported these weapons throughout the southwestern border area and into Mexico. According to the allegations, one of these individuals purchased three assault rifles with cash in Glendale, Arizona on January 16, 2010. Two of the weapons were then allegedly used in a firefight on December 14, 2010 against Customs and Border Protection (CBP) agents, killing CBP Agent Brian Terry. These extremely serious allegations were accompanied by detailed documentation which appears to lend credibility to the claims and partially corroborates them.¹¹⁵

Upon receipt of Senator Grassley's letter, ATF immediately forwarded it to the DOJ OLA:¹¹⁶

¹¹⁶ Email from Gregory Rasnake to Ron Weich, et al. (Jan. 27, 2011) [HOCR 003637]. The DOJ OIG report states: "Upon receiving Sen. Grassley's January 27 letter, officials in both the U.S. Attorney's Office and at ATF immediately gathered information about the conduct of Jaime Avila, who had purchased the two weapons found at the Terry murder scene. This was not, however, the first time that such an effort had been undertaken. . . . [I]mmediately following Agent Terry's murder on December 15, and the discovery that two firearms found at the scene were connected to Operation Fast and Furious, both the U.S. Attorney's Office in Arizona and ATF's Phoenix Field Division undertook an immediate review of Avila's straw purchasing activity, which resulted in Avila's arrest on December 15. On December 16 and 17, memorandums were provided to the leadership of both ATF and the Department that summarized the Fast and Furious investigation and the details of Avila's straw purchasing activity. However, despite learning about this connection between firearms found at the scene of Agent Terry's murder and an ongoing ATF firearms trafficking investigation, the leadership of ATF and the Department took no further action to understand how this connection came about. As a result, when Sen. Grassley's letter arrived on January 27, the leadership at ATF Headquarters and at the Department knew no more on that date about the link between Operation

Just got off the phone with Grassley's staffer.

He wants these questions/issues answered/addressed:

- 1.) That firearms were sold to known or suspected traffickers in AZ and that the FFL informed ATF that he had concerns,
- 2.) That ATF asked the dealer to continue making the sales in furtherance of their investigation,
- 3.) That two of these weapons were recovered from the scene of the 12/14/2010 fire that killed CBP Agent Brian Terry and that one of those weapons was actually used to kill Agent Terry.
- 4.) An overview of how Project Gunrunner works.

I mentioned that I didn't know how much information we would be able to share with them because this is an open case/investigation. They cited numerous occasions where they have been briefed on open cases and stated that they need to be briefed to assess whether the information they have is viable or not. They claim to have "documentation" that confirms their concerns. They are firm on their date of doing something by next Thursday, 2/3/2011.

“[H]ow wonderful the thought of being able to conceal all of your evidence and spring it on the Defense at trial.”

The bottom line is we couldn't even ask them for it. It would be viewed as impolite. You see - they have no reason to share. As a Prosecutor, how wonderful the thought of being able to conceal all of your evidence and spring it on the Defense at trial. The likelihood that they would give it to us is so remote, that I suggest it is not worth the risk of offending them; especially after they were “kind” enough to preview what they were looking for. On this Jim and I concur.

I think the important thing for us to do is to convince the ODAG and OLA to let us tell our side of this story, and to not “knee-jerk” hide behind the Linder Letter. My initial thoughts were to hide and punt, but after my conversation with Grassley's staffers - I don't believe that dog is gonna hunt. Grassley's team is trying to access the “craziness” factor of the information they have before they go out on a limb. But they are serious and this has the attention of his Senior staff.

I would like to see tomorrow afternoon all the material (documents) including all reports tantamount to the case record on the defendant who sold the weapons involved in the shooting with the CBP. Also, I think we need to call over to the higher levels of the FBI and find out the results of the forensic testing on the guns that came from our guy. Ken

Melson later testified that he wanted to brief Senator Grassley's staff on the specific case.

And after receiving that letter, our first instinct and intuition was to directly march over to Senator Grassley's office and brief him on what Fast and Furious was for purposes of explaining the concept and the role it played and how it got there, and where ATF was going in it. And we expressed that desire to the [Deputy Attorney General's] office.¹²³

Similarly, according to the OIG report:

Melson told the OIG that after receiving the January 27 letter he also asked [Faith] Burton if he could meet with Sen. Grassley to "open up a line of communication and talk to them about what the issue is, and so we can get answers for him even though it was an ongoing case, you can get answers, and you can talk about investigative methodologies which don't harm the ongoing case." Melson stated that Burton told him that it would be against Department policy to discuss an open investigation and that he could not meet with Sen. Grassley.¹²⁴

“We talked with them about providing a briefing . . . to respond to the staff interests without getting into any non-public info regarding the pending matter.”

Ron, Molly and Mary and I had a long conversation with ATF folks (Ken, Greg, et al) this afternoon about the Grassley letter and the follow up email from Brian Downey, seeking info about the pending investigation. We talked with them about providing a briefing that would address Project Gunrunner, the IG Report, and the practical legal requirements they must observe in the course of their investigations (e.g. probable cause) in order to respond to the staff interests without getting into any non-public info regarding the pending matter. It sounds like they’ve got talkers on the Project and their response to the IG report (approved already by ODAG?) and we asked them to draft the talkers for address the 3rd prong so that we can assist them in preparing for the briefing that stay within the appropriate boundaries. Apparently, they received a fair amount of push back from Jason Foster of Grassley’s staff about how they receive briefings on pending investigations all the time, but we set the record straight on that (the anthrax example Jason cited is no precedent for the current demand for reasons clear to ATF now). I think we can work this out, but we’ll probably have to make the next call to Jason or Brian with ATF and may need to go with them. I wanted you to know about this in light of the AG’s meeting with the Senator – understand that we want all to go smoothly. Happy to discuss on Monday if that’s helpful. Thanks. FB

FINDING: The Justice Department did not take seriously Senator Grassley’s letter or the obligation to uncover the truth about Fast and Furious and the Terry murder, relying almost exclusively on information from the individuals accused of wrongdoing and failing to give credence to even departmental information conflicting with those individuals’ accounts.

"ATF can and should strongly refute that"

The weapon used to kill agent Terry was purchased from the FFL before the Fast and Furious investigation ever began - so ATF can and should strongly refute that.

The same morning, The Arizona Republic published a story about the connection between Fast and Furious and the Terry murder on the front page, under the headline, "Claims tie ATF sting to guns in shootout: Senator links gun buy to border agent's death."¹³⁶ The story stated:

Bandits who gunned down a U.S. Border Patrol agent during a December firefight near Nogales may have been armed with assault rifles purchased from a Valley gun store in conjunction with a federal sting operation and subsequently smuggled into Mexico, according to a key member of the U.S. Senate Judiciary Committee.

Tom Mangan, an ATF spokesman in Phoenix, said he was 'unaware of any guns allowed to go south of the border,' either intentionally or inadvertently.¹³⁷

FINDING: Documents and testimony show as of February 4, 2011, when the Justice Department wrote to Senator Grassley that “ATF makes every effort to interdict” firearms purchased by straws, Department officials in Washington had information that detailed at least one instance in Fast and Furious where ATF allowed firearms to walk.

Later that afternoon, Senator Grassley’s staff spoke by phone with Special Agent Gary Styers, an ATF agent in Texas who had previously been assigned to ATF’s Group VII in the Phoenix Field Division during Fast and Furious. That night, Ron Weich emailed Faith Burton:¹⁴⁹

¹⁴⁸ Email from Lanny Breuer to Jason Weinstein and Dennis Burke (Feb. 2, 2011) [HOCR 004423–24]. In November of that year, when asked whether he reviewed the February 4 letter before it was sent to Congress, Breuer testified: “Senator, again, I just want to be clear that, as I told you a moment ago, I regret that in April of 2010 that I did not draw the connection between Wide Receiver and Fast and Furious. Moreover, I regret that—that even . . . earlier this year that I didn’t draw that connection. In direct answer to your question, senator, I can say—I cannot say for sure whether I saw a draft of the letter that was sent to you. What I can tell you, senator, is at that time, I was in Mexico dealing with very real issues that we are all so committed to.” *Combating International Organized Crime: Hearing before the S. Ron and Faith,

I just wanted to alert you that Billy Hoover is receiving reports that Grassley's staff is contacting current and former ATF field agents to inquire about the open investigation into the Brian Terry murder and Project Gunrunner. Ron, at my suggestion, I thinking Billy is going to try to contact you to explain the situation and discuss how to respond. I believe ATF is looking for guidance on two issues: First, in light of Grassley's recent Whistleblower claims, what guidance can ATF offer its field agents who have been (or may be) contacted by Grassley's staff? Second, what steps can we (either at Main DOJ or ATF) take to dissuade Grassley's staff from contacting agents and potentially compromising these ongoing investigations?

Later that night, Smith forwarded Weich's response to officials in the Deputy Attorney General's office, adding an update:¹⁵¹

The next day, on Thursday, February 3, 2011, Special Agent Styers sent a memorandum up the chain of command documenting his interactions on the case.¹⁵² Special Agent Styers' memorandum stated:¹⁵³

¹⁵⁰ Email from Brad Smith to Ron Weich and Faith Burton (Feb. 2, 2011) [DOJ-FF-04929-31].

¹⁵¹ Email from Brad Smith to Lisa Monaco, et al. (Feb. 2, 2011) [DOJ-FF-04929-31].

Special Agent Styers was then asked about his general impression of the Fast and Furious case. Special Agent Styers stated that the case had systematically divided and isolated agents from the group. The case agent had solicited the advice of numerous experienced agents, including Special Agent Styers, regarding how to conduct and end the wiretap operations and case overall. Special Agent Styers gave the case agent his honest opinion and advice since Special Agent Styers had worked two wiretap investigations in his career. Special Agent Styers felt that his advice and opinions, as well as other agents' advice and opinions were widely disregarded. Along with other agents within the group, Special Agent Styers explained that he was no longer asked to assist with Fast and Furious and concentrated on his assigned cases and provided necessary assistance to fellow agents within the detail and group.

“[T]he case had systematically divided and isolated agents from the group”

It continued:¹⁵⁴

Downey and Donovan asked Special Agent Styers what he felt was incorrect about the way the Fast and Furious case was conducted. Special Agent Styers explained that first and foremost, it is unheard of to have an active wiretap investigation without full time dedicated surveillance units on the ground. Special Agent Styers relayed that no agents in the group were assigned to surveillance on the Fast and Furious case. Special Agent Styers said that other agencies or task force officers may have been used to conduct surveillance and respond to calls of FFLs, but it seemed that either the case agent or Group Supervisor would poll the office for agents who were available to respond at short notice.

“[I]t is unheard of to have an active wiretap investigation without full time dedicated surveillance units on the ground.”

The memorandum also detailed a specific instance where ATF let firearms walk:¹⁵⁵

“McAllister told all the agents to leave the immediate area.”

Downey and Donovan inquired as to the role that Special Agent Styers had in this case and Special Agent Styers advised that he had assisted with some surveillance operations with the case. Special Agent Styers was asked to describe the operations and relayed that one of the operations was a suspected transaction that was to occur at a gas station and detailed agents were asked to cover the transaction. While positioning to observe the suspects, Special Agent Styers and other detailed agents were told by Special Agent McAllister that agents were too close and would burn the operation. Special Agent McAllister told all the agents to leave the immediate area. While the agents were repositioning, the transaction between the suspects took place and the vehicle that took possession of the firearms eventually left the area without agents following it.

The memorandum was transmitted that day to ATF Deputy Director Hoover.¹⁵⁶ Hoover reported to the Committees that he promptly notified ATF Senior Counsel Brad Smith of the memorandum and stated that OLA staff were also aware of the memorandum.¹⁵⁷ The same day, Faith Burton emailed Hoover and recommended a response in case agents asked for guidance on how to handle contacts from Senator Grassley's staff:¹⁵⁸

Subject: FW: Need quick guidance about whether/to what extent the whistleblower protection statute speaks to disclosures to Congress.

I'd recommend something along these lines if agents ask for guidance about how to respond to contacts from Senator's Grassley's staff -

During the last week in January, Senator Grassley wrote to ATF, reporting allegations that ATF had sanctioned the sale of assault weapons to suspected straw purchasers and that these weapons were used in the killing of Customs and Border Protection Agent Brian Terry. The Department has sent a written response to Senator Grassley, advising him that these allegations are not true. In further response to his requests, we expect to schedule a briefing by appropriate ATF representatives with staff for Senator Grassley and other Members of the Senate Judiciary Committee in the near future about Project Gunrunner and ATF's effort to work with its law enforcement partners to build cases that will disrupt and dismantle criminal organizations.

As always, you are in no way obligated to respond to congressional contacts or requests for information and generally, consistent with ATF policy, you should refer congressional staff who seek information from you to ATF's office of congressional affairs. You are not authorized to disclose non-public information about law enforcement matters outside of ATF or the Department of Justice to anyone, including congressional staff. This is important to protect the independence and effectiveness of our law enforcement efforts as well as the privacy and due process interests of individuals who are involved in these investigations.

If you have information about waste, fraud, or abuse within ATF - or any actions by Department employees that you believe constitute professional misconduct, you are encouraged to report that information to your supervisors and/or the Department's Office of Inspector General.

Ultimately, this language was not distributed to ATF employees.¹⁵⁹

“Are we still planning to get the letter out today?”

One of our public affairs guys got word that Grassley’s office is telling media that “there may be something to this” because ATF is not answering. Are we still planning to get the letter out today?

Later that night, Burke added further commentary:¹⁶²

“Grassley”[s] staff, acting as willing stooges for the Gun Lobby”

What is so offensive about this whole project is that Grassley’ staff, acting as willing stooges for the Gun Lobby, have attempted to distract from the incredible success in dismantling SWB gun trafficking operations (while also changing an acceptable culture of straw purchasing) by not uttering one word of rightful praise and thanks to ATF -- but, instead, lobbing this reckless despicable accusation that ATF is complicit in the murder of a fellow federal law enforcement officer.

No commentary by Grassley on the lax laws, nor greedy gun shop owners, nor careless straw purchasers, and not boo about the evil gun traffickers for the Cartels. Nope. Just demonize ATF w/ a strategically-timed repulsive letter e-mailed to the entire press world before we ever saw it.

Yet, we feel obligated to gratuitously commend Grassley for his strong support of the Department’ law enforcement mission. That I don’t get.

I sat there during the press conference on this case wondering how the Gun Lobby would counter the American public’ exposure to the legality of people buying 20-30 AK-47s during one purchase w no reporting requirement. Well, they figured out there counter. Never crossed my mine they would stoop this low -- and, that now we are playing defense w this low-tone response.

“Just demonize ATF w/ a strategically -timed repulsive letter”

DOJ’s letter to Senator Grassley on Friday, February 4, 2011, stated: “ATF makes every effort to interdict weapons that have been purchased illegally and prevent their transportation to Mexico.”¹⁶³ The letter made no mention of the firearms recovered at the murder scene of Border Patrol Agent Brian Terry. However, it did state:

We . . . want to protect investigations and the law enforcement personnel who directly conduct them from inappropriate political influence. For this reason, we respectfully request that Committee staff not contact law enforcement personnel seeking information about pending criminal investigations, including the death of Customs and Border Protection Agent Brian Terry. . . . The DOJ OIG report found that DOJ’s “information gathering and drafting process” was “poorly executed” and that DOJ failed to make a “serious effort” to investigate Senator Grassley’s allegations. It stated:

[T]he Department is ultimately responsible for representations that it makes to Congress. . . . [A] poorly executed information gathering and drafting process and questionable judgments by Department officials contributed to the inclusion of inaccurate information in the February 4 letter, and therefore the Department shares responsibility for issuing an inaccurate letter with the component officials they relied upon for information.¹⁶⁵

The allegation in Sen. Grassley’s January 27 letter that ATF had sanctioned the sale of hundreds of assault weapons contained the implication that among these weapons were two that may have been used in a firefight that resulted in the death of a federal law enforcement officer. We do not believe that the gravity of this allegation was met with an equally serious effort by the Department to determine whether ATF and the U.S. Attorney’s Office had allowed the sale of hundreds of weapons to straw purchasers. This was particularly the case in this instance because the Department knew that hundreds of assault weapons had indeed been sold to straw purchasers during the Fast and Furious investigation and that two of those firearms had in fact been found at the scene of Agent Terry’s murder.¹⁶⁶

[I]n a unique circumstance such as this, where a credible allegation has been made regarding potentially serious misconduct involving those components, deference to officials close to the activity at issue should be tempered by the recognition that those officials are also invested in a positive portrayal of the activity and their alleged involvement in it. As such, officials who should be knowledgeable and forthcoming about the activity may be inclined, perhaps even unintentionally, to shade or ignore unhelpful facts when providing information about their conduct to senior Department officials. This is particularly true where, as here, Congress seeks specific information concerning allegations of improper activities.¹⁶⁷

We concluded that during the drafting process Weinstein advocated for ATF and the U.S. Attorney’s Office rather than responsibly gathering information about their conduct of the Fast and Furious investigation. . . . [W]e found that he did so despite indications during the fact-gathering and letter-drafting process that should have alerted him to the fact that U.S. Attorney Dennis Burke, who provided emphatic assurances about ATF's conduct, was an unreliable source of information. Moreover, Weinstein urged Burton to adopt an aggressive posture in the drafting of the response and sought to enlist the support of Burke and others in arguing against Burton's more measured approach to the letter. We believe that Weinstein's staunch support of ATF led him to lose perspective and provide Burton with information that distorted what a senior component official (Hoover) had told them about Avila's status as a straw purchaser in November 2009.¹⁶⁸

DOJ Denies Claim About Guns Used In Border Shootout.

AP NewsBreak: DOJ denies border shootout claim

(AP) – 18 hours ago

PHOENIX (AP) — The U.S. Justice Department denied a claim made to lawmakers that two guns sold in purchases sanctioned by federal firearms agents were later used in a shootout that left a Border Patrol agent dead near the Arizona-Mexico border.

“Grassley staffer mentions that documents have been provided with the whistleblower allegations.”

Weinstein further forwarded the article to Breuer and Raman.¹⁷³

Senator Grassley's letter to Attorney General Holder that night noted that so far DOJ's response had been "little more than delay and denial."¹⁷⁷ The letter stated:

The Department said the ATF makes 'every effort to interdict weapons that have been purchased illegally and prevent their transportation into Mexico.' However, as I explained in my initial letter to Acting Director Melson, the allegations I received are supported by documentation.

The Justice Department's reply asked that Committee staff stop speaking to law enforcement personnel about these matters. However, if not for the bravery and patriotism of law enforcement personnel who were willing to put their careers on the line, this Committee would have been forced to rely on nothing more than rumors in the blogosphere and a Justice Department denial to resolve these allegations. We need more than that. To be an effective check on Executive Branch power, we need cold, hard facts.¹⁷⁸

Subject: RE: Redaig Grassley's letter more closely - it does not state any facts indicating

Just to go into more detail on Faith's point—they've conflated allegations as bait:

"According to whistleblowers, a least one gun dealer wanted to stop participating in sales like those to [ATF] sometime around October 2009. However, the ATF allegedly encouraged the dealer to continue selling to suspected traffickers and asked the dealer to forward information about the sales to the Bureau.

[Paragraph break]

"The deal [ATF] who sold the weapons allegedly recovered at the scene of Agent Terry's death met with both ATF representatives and Assistant US Attorneys as early as December 17, 2009, to 'discuss his role as an FFL during the investigation.'" [The letter makes no representations about what was said at this meeting.]

So the letter doesn't actually ever say that it was [ATF] that allegedly wanted to stop selling to [ATF] and was told to continue. They wrote it carefully because they are either guessing that it was, and want ATF to confirm, or they're trying to get ATF to deny it and talk about the case.

Emails show that Senator Grassley's letter raised concerns for Attorney General Holder. Specifically, Holder was concerned by the assertions that ATF encouraged a hesitant firearms dealer to continue to sell firearms to suspected traffickers, and that there had been no contact with Agent Terry's family. Grindler relayed Holder's concerns in an email to Lisa Monaco and Monty Wilkinson:¹⁸⁴

Subject: Sen Grassley allegations about ATF

Gary,

“From talking to Jason [Weinstein], my understanding is that OLA made the judgment not to address any of the specific allegations in Sen. Grassley’s letters during the briefing.”

“During the Q&A at the briefing, Sen. Grassley’s staffers asked a number of specific questions . . . which our folks declined to answer”

To follow up on our conversation of Friday morning, prior to the Senate staff briefing on Thursday, Jason checked with the USAO in AZ and with ATF (both HQ and AZ) and was advised that the specific allegation in Sen. Grassley’s most recent letter -- that ATF encouraged a reluctant FFL to continue to make sales to suspected traffickers - is false.

From talking to Jason, my understanding is that OLA made the judgment not to address any of the specific allegations in Sen. Grassley’s letters during the briefing. Instead, Jason and the ATF reps. provided a tutorial of sorts on how cases against sophisticated gun trafficking organizations like the one in AZ are built. They walked the staffers through the kind of tactical and investigative judgments involved at each stage of the investigation, drawing an analogy between gun trafficking cases and drug conspiracy cases. The goal - and by all accounts it seems to have worked - was to communicate that the ATF’s work in the AZ case and others like it reflected sound judgment and investigative work.

During the Q&A at the briefing, Sen. Grassley’s staffers asked a number of specific questions about the AZ investigation, which our folks declined to answer, with one exception. A staffer asked whether as part of the AZ case, ATF ever encouraged a reluctant FFL to continue unlawful sales. Jason and the ATF reps. responded that based on their knowledge of the case, they were unaware of that ever having happened in this investigation.

Up to this point, our inquiries about the Grassley allegations have been at the U.S. Attorney/SAC level. If the AG would like us to look into those allegations further, I could have Jason talk specifically to the AUSAs and case agents and report back. Just let us know how you’d like us to proceed.

Best, Lanny

On Wednesday, February 16, 2011, Senator Grassley wrote to Attorney General Holder.¹⁹⁴ He noted that the briefers on February 10 “refused to answer specific questions about the facts and circumstances that led me to request the briefing.”¹⁹⁵ He also identified the key question of the investigation: “When asked whether ATF had encouraged any gun dealer to proceed with sales to known or suspected traffickers such as [the individual whose guns were found at the scene of Terry’s death], the briefers only said they did not have any ‘personal knowledge’ of that.”¹⁹⁶ Thus, he requested various documents from DOJ.

The letter prompted questions from Attorney General Holder, asking for further confirmation of the accuracy of the Department’s representations to Senator Grassley:¹⁹⁷

FINDING: The Justice Department did not reach out in a meaningful way to the Terry family to provide support and answers. In fact, Department officials who were tasked with that outreach were hostile to the Terry family's pleas for answers, and even mocked the Terry family. The Terry family was only provided information the Justice Department intended to make public.

As noted above, Senator Grassley's February 9 letter included a plea from the mother of Brian Terry that "[w]e want to know who allowed the sale of that gun that murdered our son" and that "we want some answers." DOJ, however, provided no response to Senator Grassley throughout the rest of February. STEP MOTHER FEARS "COVER-UP" IN BORDER AGENT'S DEATH. In an "exclusive" interview with FOX News Channel (2/22, 12:28 p.m. EDT), Carolyn Terry, the step mother of slain Border Patrol Agent Brian Terry, who was killed by suspected bandits in southern Arizona last December, said she fears the government is "covering up" the details surrounding her son's death. In what it called "new developments," FOX reported, "Number one, three of the four suspects arrested that night are innocent, they are being deported as just illegal immigrants. Two, the weapon used to kill agent Terry has been sourced not to Mexico but to a Phoenix gun store that was working with the federal government, yet agents did nothing to stop the sale or transfer those guns to the cartel that killed Terry. And finally, the US Senate wants answers, including a 30-page document, that details the role of the ATF in agent Terry's death."

Despite instructions from Attorney General Holder to find “real answers,” Deputy Assistant Attorney General Jason Weinstein still took at face value the information provided by the U.S. Attorney’s Office in Arizona—the very officials who were the subjects of the investigation. Only five months after his review would Weinstein read the case reports for the first time and express doubts about his initial conclusions.

Dennis,

We just watched the piece. It is about 5 minutes long and is very negative, alleging ATF improprieties in the Fast and Furious investigation and death of Agent Terry. The piece highlighted multiple unnamed ATF agents involved in the investigation who were allegedly warning managers of dangerous investigative practices (allowing straw purchases from seven FFLs in 2009).

We agree that it's time to go on the offensive with strong statements about the nature of firearms trafficking.

Hi Monty,

I can give you a read-out tomorrow. I also asked ATF to put together a line-by-line analysis of the allegations in Grassley's letter, which I will give you. Bottom line: ATF categorically denies ever allowing any weapons to enter Mexico illegally, and it repeatedly told us that it didn't encourage dealers to make sales that made them "uncomfortable." And, as I think you may have heard Billy mention at last week's monthly ATF-DAG meeting, ballistics indicate that the firearm that killed Agent Terry wasn't one of the alleged straw purchases.

In case you haven’t seen this, here’s the link. It’s very specific, which makes it troubling and likely to get more traction. We need to help prep the AG for testimony next week, and he’s certain to be asked about this. Can we have a call today to talk about the specific allegations in the story and the purported support for them?

“Can we have a call today to talk about the specific allegations in the story and the purported support for them?”

Weinstein’s email led to a phone call with Emory Hurley, the main prosecutor on Operation Fast and Furious in the U.S. Attorney’s Office for the District of Arizona. On this phone call, Hurley provided answers to Weinstein’s questions about firearms sales that should have put Weinstein on alert that the U.S. Attorney’s Office may have knowingly allowed firearms sales to suspected traffickers. However, Weinstein did not realize the significance of the answer until five months later, in July 2011. Weinstein refused to provide information regarding this phone call in his interview with Committee staff. However, the DOJ OIG report states:

Weinstein told the OIG that in order to gather information relevant to Sen. Grassley’s allegations, he asked Hurley to focus on those transactions that ATF and the U.S. Attorney’s Office knew about prior to the purchase. Specifically, Weinstein stated that he asked Hurley whether there were any purchases for which it was known in advance through a wire conversation that there was probable cause to believe that the sale would be illegal. Weinstein stated that Hurley “did not know the answer off the top of his head,” and the email noted that the U.S. Attorney’s Office would be providing this information at a later time. Weinstein told us that he was surprised by this because “the calls that give you probable cause before the guy walks in the door are . . . one of the things you’re hoping and praying to get through the wire.” He added that “the significance of [Hurley’s] failure to know that didn’t register with me until later,” when Weinstein read the ROIs about prospective purchases in the case in July 2011.²¹⁹

On Saturday, February 26, 2011, Weinstein emailed Goldberg, Wilkinson, and Moran a four-page summary of what he learned from the Arizona U.S. Attorney’s office and ATF.²²⁰ On

Subject: AZ gun trafficking case

Stuart/Monty/Molly,

As you know, the DAG asked me to obtain more information about the manner in which the Arizona gun trafficking investigation known as “Fast and Furious” was put together.

“[T]he DAG asked me to obtain more information about . . . ‘Fast and Furious’”

As indicated above, this was an extraordinarily complex case, and I can give you only a higher-altitude view of it, based on the information provided by the USAO and ATF. But based on my conversation yesterday with the AUSA and Crim Chief, and based on prior conversations with Dennis Burke and with the ATF SAC, this investigation was conducted - and the decisions about when to seize guns were made - thoughtfully, carefully, and strategically.

I hope this is helpful.

Jason

On Wednesday, March 2, 2011, DOJ responded to Senator Grassley’s February 9 and February 16 letters.²²⁴ Rather than responding to the concerns Senator Grassley had raised, the letter noted that DOJ appreciated the opportunity to brief Committee staff regarding ATF’s efforts to interdict firearms, and indicated that the Attorney General had asked the Acting Inspector General to “evaluate the concerns that have been raised about ATF investigative actions.”²²⁵

2. Whistleblowers Go Public

FINDING: It was not until whistleblowers went public with details about Fast and Furious in early March 2011 that the Justice Department started to seriously consider the implications of the tragic operation. Still, the Department mainly focused on responding to the media and public relations fallout from those revelations.

On Thursday, March 3, 2011, Senator Grassley again wrote to DOJ, criticizing DOJ's refusal to provide information and highlighting whistleblower documents that contradicted DOJ's representations to Congress. After receiving this letter and after whistleblowers made public statements about gunwalking in Operation Fast and Furious, DOJ began to discuss the severity of the situation. Some DOJ officials recognized a need to examine more closely the facts, but some remained focused on saving face. It is clear from the emails that, as of March 2011, DOJ lacked clarity on whether ATF permitted gunwalking in Operation Fast and Furious. Moreover, emails show that ATF and DOJ did not share the same definition of gunwalking—in fact, it seems that the issue of how to define gunwalking arose for the first time on March 10, 2011.

Senator Grassley's March 3, 2011 letter included documents obtained from whistleblowers and stated:²²⁶

There are many instances where the Justice Department and its components choose to provide information about pending investigations to Congress. These examples are not always officially documented, but often occur when there are particularly egregious allegations of government misconduct or there is an extremely high level of public interest in an investigation. Getting to the truth of the ATF whistleblower allegations in this case is extremely important to the family of Brian Terry and should be important to all Americans. There is no reason to wait the unknown number of years it might take for all of the trials and all of the appeals to be exhausted. The time for truth is now. . . . [P]lease explain how the denials in the Justice Department's February 4, 2011 letter to me can be squared with the evidence.²²⁷

That evening, Smith emailed Schmaler, stating that ATF found a document that contradicted ATF's prior statements that it "makes every effort to interdict weapons that have been purchased illegally and prevent their transportation to Mexico".²²⁸

“CBS will be running a story this evening concerning ATF’s Project Gunrunner activities”

Tracy,

I understand that you are already aware that CBS will be running a story this evening concerning ATF’s Project Gunrunner activities and allegations that it knowingly allowed firearms to enter Mexico. Stuart and I just chatted briefly with Ken Melson and Billy Hoover at ATF about the story, and we wanted to pass along a few points that came up in our conversation, just in case you weren’t aware of them.

Last night, ATF found a document indicating that, on at least one occasion, an ATF agent witnessed a suspected straw purchaser resell firearms, but for reasons that remain unclear (there is some speculation that the straw’s erratic driving may have played a role), broke off surveillance of the straw and did not take him into custody following the transaction. As described to us, this document appears contrary to statements from ATF last month indicating that its agents arrested suspects straws along the Southwest Border as soon as they had concrete evidence indicating the suspect straws were engaged in illegal firearms trafficking. Stuart and I have requested a copy of the document, and we will share it once we have it.

Later that evening, ATF Special Agent John Dodson appeared on CBS Evening News in an interview with investigative reporter Sharyl Attkisson.²³⁰ The segment stated:

Dodson’s job is to stop gun trafficking across the border. Instead, he says he was ordered to sit by and watch it happen. Investigators call the tactic letting guns “walk.” . . . Dodson’s bosses say that never happened. Now, he’s risking his job to go public. “I’m boots on the ground here in Phoenix, telling you we’ve been doing it every day since I’ve been here,” he said. “Here I am. Tell me I didn’t do the things I did. Tell me you didn’t order me to do the things I did. Tell me it didn’t happen. Now you have a name on it. You have a face to put with it. Here I am. Someone now, tell me it didn’t happen.”²³¹

The story concluded:

Dodson said he hopes that speaking out helps Terry’s family. They haven’t been told much of anything about his murder – or where the bullet came from. “First of all, I’d tell them that I’m sorry. Second of all, I’d tell that I’ve done everything that I can for them to get to the truth,” Dodson said. “After this, I don’t know what else I can do. But I hope they get it.”²³²

Thanks, Ken. I chatted with Billy a few minutes ago, and he said ATF was doing a hard scrub on the case this afternoon. I bet the timelines and chronologies will be very helpful in responding to future inquiries, etc. Just to reiterate what I realize is obvious: Any proposed statement will have to be vetted carefully by ATF, CRM, the USAO, OLA, and OPA, and probably others. I think one question we'll have to figure out is whether a DOJ/Washington-issued statement would help or hurt us vis-à-vis the Hill, the media, and other reviews, or whether it will just stir-up more controversy or attention that, at least for the time being, may be partially mitigated by noting that the AG has asked OIG to consider opening a review. And, to the extent we issue any statement, we'll have to be dead-to-rights certain that the facts in the statement are correct. Again, I apologize for saying what is as plain as day. I just think that we would be in a particularly bad spot (both in Mexico and domestically), if, in a rush to respond to the embassy's request, DOJ ended up making a statement that we subsequently had to walk back.

Subject: Latest CBS Segment on ATF

This is from previous interview w. ATF agent. Few things –

- 1) overall the piece hinges on her (willful?) lack of understanding about the gun laws. her language suggests a suspected straw purchaser should be arrested at time of sale and ffls are being forced to break law by selling to them. This is easy to push back on with our response re: current law and what unique factors exist in gun investigations. She knows this but continues to use terms like “gunrunner”.
- 2) she cites FFLs being used as paid CIs – this could be routine and appropriate use -- checking w. ATF.
- 3) she cites court docs that suggest guns were monitored crossing border – checking w. USAO and ATF.

Schmaler also emailed Ambassador Pascual and others at the State Department to notify them that the story referenced court documents that contradicted DOJ's position that ATF did not have knowledge of firearms crossing the border to Mexico:²⁴⁸

We're not going to be able get these in at this point. On the language, it is important to phrase it as the AG asked the IG to review. He can't order the IG to investigate –pls note that in any points. provided the accurate language in the guidance earlier this week.

I'd want to hear from ATF on the other points below – a recent report seemed to suggest court docs indicated there was knowledge of border crossing. Not sure if that's accurate – ATF might know -- but until we do – better to be careful in public comments. As to other point – that seems to be public info, but ATF can confirm.

Stepmom is irrational and I firmly believe she and the brother enjoy being in the limelight. Whatever they are told will not change their irrationality and will just cause them to contact the news. If they learned about our hope for a wire I have no doubt that would have been on the news also. We should deal only with the intelligent side of the family (e.g. Terry’s sister). The intelligent side of the family knows that step mom is nuts. When we last spoke to sister she made that very clear to us.

Stepmother and brother are building a defense for the killers and anytime we talk to them we are just giving them more ammo to support their ridiculous allegations.

Also, lost in this are the other victims in the case (the agents who were with Terry when he was killed). I think we need to reach out to them and tell them we know what they are hearing on hate TV is BS.

Guys: I am only okay with this if ATF essentially certifies to this (in particular the last sentence, which is the most definitive factual statement: "At no time did any agent participate in any transaction, or urge or assist any person in buying, selling, or transporting any weapon in the U.S. or across the border."). I really, really don't want CRM to be making representations for ATF on a case in which we had zero involvement. And, if any of this turns out to be wrong after further digging by ATF or OIG, I don't want CRM to get blamed. I don't mind sticking our neck out on our cases where we are the ones that are looking for the facts, but I don't want us to do that for ATF in a matter where we are not involved.
(Why is CRM being used as a go-between ODAG and ATF on this? Jason, I know you're out, but I think you're in the best position to convey this message to ODAG.)

I understand that you all have asked Adam to come up with some language about the scope and techniques that were/were not used in F&F that can be included in a response to Lamar Smith and others, as well as in a preliminary response to Mexico.

As you know, I've already drafted a response to Smith that can also be used for other members; OIA has since revised that draft and should be circulating those revisions later today.

At the meeting on Thursday, there appeared to be some agreement that we should try to add some language to our congressional responses that captures, with appropriate disclaimers, the fact that to date ATF has discovered only a few (non-F&F) instances where agents intentionally let guns "walk."

I'm not sure if that's what gave rise to your request to Adam, or if you more generally wanted specific language about the F&F investigation, but either way, we've discussed this further within CRM and we think that the language that goes into the letter is more appropriately crafted by ATF, because ATF is the only entity that is in the position to know all those facts. Also, at this point, with Matt doing a deeper dive into F&F than I was in a position to do, Matt is probably in the best position to be, as an initial matter, reviewing ATF's draft language. Although we are always more than happy to help in areas that are not strictly in "our lane," this particular inquiry is fact-intensive, was not prosecuted by CRM, and was investigated by ATF -- therefore, CRM is just not in a good place to be the ones describing the facts. We'd be happy to look at any proposed language by ATF once it's been drafted, just to ensure that OIA and others are kept in the loop wrt to communications to Mexican law enforcement, but I don't think we should be the initial drafters re facts that are not within our knowledge.

"[T]here appeared to be some agreement that we should try to add some language to our congressional responses that captures . . . the fact that to date ATF has discovered only a few (non-F&F) instances where agents intentionally let guns 'walk.'"

No one seems to be able to say with any authority whether this was or wasn't such a UC investigation, and, at least as far as I am aware, the US has to date made no response to these allegations, although we do refer to the case being the subject of internal investigation/inquiry (which I suspect aggravates rather than mitigates the temperature of the rhetoric in Mexico).

As of this point, Matt Axelrod had worked his way through a significant portion of the Department’s documents regarding the case.²⁸⁴ That night, he emailed Arizona U.S. Attorney’s Office Criminal Division Chief Patrick Cunningham regarding ATF “Reports of Investigation,” or ROIs:²⁸⁵

Pat,

Great speaking to you earlier. Here’s the list of ROIs falling into the two categories I described, with the caveat that I’ve only read through ROI 399 so there may be additional ones falling into these categories that I simply haven’t read yet.

“ROIs where ATF surveils . . . transfer to a third party”

1. ROIs where ATF surveils not only the purchase from the FFL but a transfer to a third party soon thereafter: 18, 33, 36, 143, 160, 219, 231, 238, 241, 259, 265, 268, 319
2. ROIs where the Title III combined with the ATF surveillance potentially gives probable cause to arrest for a violation of 924(a)(1)(A): 223, 246, 260, 261, 271, 283, 312, 335

Thanks.

We are preparing answers to the six questions for you and reviewing each ROI you sent us. We will call you to arrange some meeting times to discuss the ROIs on your schedule.

“[T]he affidavits in support of the applications each laid out the significant facts”

[Yes, we note that this case involved the approval by the DAG's Office of seven separate wiretap applications, and the affidavits in support of the applications each laid out the significant facts and problems developed during the surveillances conducted over the length of the investigations, as a matter of establishing necessity for the wires.]

Axelrod flagged the wiretap issue for Raman at the same time DOJ officials had become aware CBS Evening News planned to air a story on an additional whistleblower, ATF Attaché to Mexico Darren Gil. The segment that aired that evening on CBS Evening News stated:

In an exclusive interview with CBS News, the lead ATF official in Mexico at the time Darren Gil says somebody in the Justice Department did know about the case. Gil says his supervisor at ATF's Washington D.C. headquarters told him point-blank the operation was approved even higher than ATF Director Kenneth Melson.²⁹²

Matt Axelrod indicated that DAG's office wants to clear any language before it's used. Here's my crack at it (I've tried to craft it remembering, of course, that the Criminal Division does sign off on wiretaps etc, but not on the operation or strategy):

"[T]he Criminal Division does sign off on wiretaps"

"AAG Lanny Breuer did not authorize the ATF "Fast and Furious" investigation. As the Assistant Attorney General of the Criminal Division, AAG Breuer does not have any supervisory authority over the ATF and does not authorize ATF operations or investigations."

Paul O'Brien –

Urgent request – I just tried to call you. Can you please call me? There seems to be a suggestion in a draft response from the USAO to a Congressional letter that the wiretap affidavits in these investigations would have talked about "problems" conducting surveillance (I assume in the necessity section, which would be expected). But, the USAO's suggestion seems to be that the Criminal Division would have therefore divined that there is a problem with guns walking. I haven't seen the USAO's actual language, but have just heard about it. I really need someone to look at the affidavits asap to see what they say. Perhaps Paul Rosen (who I've cc'd here) can help, but we'd need the actual affidavits. Would you have them still?

"There seems to be a suggestion . . . that the Criminal Division would have . . . divined that there is a problem with guns walking."

Paul O'Brien, the Director of the Office of Enforcement Operations (the office in the Criminal Division which does the initial review of wiretap applications), responded: "We are pulling the files."²⁹⁶ By that night, a Criminal Division official was reviewing them.²⁹⁷

This story is completely misleading and unfair, but as I told Mythili, I think we want to be careful about not advancing it further by saying something didn't happen that the story doesn't actually allege. Certainly we'd push back if any other reporters wanted to follow up on this story, and certainly if directly asked by this reporter or any other the statement below is spot on. But the story really only directly says Lanny was at a meeting generally in Mexico. The rest is insinuation that he somehow knew, but if the reporter had enough to say that fact, she would have done so in her story. This is almost bait to see if she can get us to say more, which she'll then come back to us with numerous follow up questions and tomorrow's story becomes AAG Breuer didn't authorize it, but won't comment on whether he knew or provide any further detail. And then the agent comes back and swears that a trafficking case absolutely was discussed, etc., etc. I think we go down a rabbit hole that generates more stories if we start swinging at the pitch from this CBS reporter.

On Tuesday, March 29, 2011, Molly Warlow of DOJ's Criminal Division emailed Axelrod in response to edits to a State Department statement regarding Fast and Furious:³⁰⁷

"In this regard, we want to be clear that Operation Fast and Furious was not a "sting" operation, or an operation in which ATF agents were acting in an undercover capacity as buyers, sellers, or transporters of any weapons. Moreover, in absolutely no respect did Operation Fast and Furious involve our ATF agents conducting an undercover operation in Mexico. In this case, the ATF agents were attempting to identify possible straw purchasers, and those for whom the straw purchasers were buying, and others in the chain of purchase, sale, and transport of those weapons. They did this through ordinary investigative techniques undertaken within the territory of the United States: gathering intelligence, working leads, and doing surveillance. At no time did any agent participate in any illicit transaction, or urge or assist any person in illicitly purchasing, selling, or transporting any weapon in the U.S. or across the border. Moreover, Operation Fast and Furious did not involve "controlled deliveries" of weapons into Mexico, [and at no time did any agent stand idly by and watch illicit guns cross the border into Mexico – Matt I understand you were still assessing this last issue.]

In that vein, Matt has asked that we review the document request received from the committee (attached) and determine:

- 2) How much of the information is related to Fast and Furious and thus cannot be turned over?

Subject: Response to Congressman Issa letter

All,

I think we need to meet tomorrow from 2:00 to 3:00 EST to discuss the Department's response to Congressman Issa's letter dated March 16, 2011. As I mentioned to some of you on the phone, we need to figure out what information/documents we have that are responsive to the request and are at the same time not related to the ongoing criminal investigation. I'm hopeful that we can get a preliminary readout from the USAO and ATF on that tomorrow during the meeting. I'll have my assistant set up a call-in # for the folks in Arizona and will get a conference room here for everyone else. Thanks.

That night, Melson decided to read some of the wiretap applications for himself. He discovered that some the wiretap applications that U.S. Attorneys approved included affidavits suggesting there was probable cause to believe that straw purchasers were taking firearms across the border. He later told the Committees in a transcribed interview:

[W]hile flying to one of my divisions . . . , and I think it may have been on March 30th, I was reading through the some of the wiretap applications on the plane. In fact, I think I was the first, other than a couple of agents who reviewed all of the ROIs and everything, but missed the smoking guns.

I decided to have confidence that we've looked at everything, that I would read them all. So sitting on the plane, reading the wiretap affidavit and one of the wiretap affidavits – in fact, I think more than one, there was a statement in there prepared by the agents – the AUSA and reviewed by the Criminal Division that suggested there was probable cause to believe that straw purchasers were taking guns across the border.

Because they set out in the affidavit the various – the various border crossings of the straw purchasers. These were not observed border crossings. ATF did not know they were crossing the border ahead of time. These were from CBP's, the Custom and Border Protection database. We could go back and see when people go and come north because there is no southbound transactional record.

But it was apparent to me that they were suggesting that there was probable cause to believe that this information – that these straw purchasers were taking guns across the border. So while on the plane, I drafted an e-mail to our people, and said, you know, you better back off, you better back off this statement, because – the statement in this letter, this February 4th letter to Senator Grassley, because I don't believe we can say that in light of the information that our agent was swearing to before a federal district court judge to get the wiretap.³¹⁴

We met for about 2 hours today with ATF, USAO by phone, Rob and Paul in a meeting that Matt convened and made good progress in identifying a) materials we could likely produce in fairly short order; b) information we can add to our letter that would be responsive to items in his letter; and 3) requested information and docs that go to the heart of the criminal investigations (F & F plus Terry shooting).

Molly and I then spoke at length with Issa staff after that (and per agreement in our meeting), explained that we expected we can send a written response to their letter with documents within a week, noting that the requests for documents relating to the pending criminal investigations will be very difficult. Basically, I said that while we it’s unlikely we’d be in a position to give them everything they requested, we would give them everything that we could and would work with them to find ways to accommodate their information needs if at all possible. The conversation went well, ended on a positive note and they did not bring up a subpoena at all.

Seems like it would be preferable to await the subpoena and send our response as planned, with docs, early next week. Understand your interest in being in a position to respond to any press inquiries you may receive on a Friday afternoon about this, but we can work with you on a statement along the lines you suggest below. We just need it to be precisely consistent with our statements to Issa staff today. Our letter can reiterate our disappointment, but to be fair, staff have given us a heads up – so we aren't going to be surprised and they clearly want to work with us – they've just got a chairman who wants to issue a subpoena. We really can't quantify the docs yet because we haven't reviewed them; hopefully, we have more info soon, but our instincts are to stay a calm course now.

It will be treated as a declaration of war by the press, and I think we need to show clearly that he is out of line, not us, otherwise this will be portrayed as us stonewalling. A letter would just be more effective than a statement I think, and I don't see the downside of sending it. We can send a full letter next week, but this is about managing press tomorrow.

A statement is a good backup, but a letter would be more productive with the press -- they will see it as directly engaging with Issa versus indirectly with them. If there are risks to a letter that outweigh the benefit gained in the press, then we should weigh those against the upside and make a judgment call. But if there is no appreciable downside (and given that he is already sending us a subpoena I don't know what it would be), then I don't see why we wouldn't do the short letter. Ron, Matt's draft is not a good letter. Much too weak on the open investigation point and suggesting we'll provide a "substantial" number of documents while withholding only "some" relating to the investigation into the death of the agent. Much more likely, it's the reverse: we'll provide only some and withhold a substantial number, and they concern not just the murder investigation but also the longstanding Fast and Furious investigation.

To respond to the subpoena, DOJ officials strategized about how to produce as few documents as possible to Chairman Issa without angering the Committee or demonstrating the necessity of the subpoena. Jim,

Since we didn't have a staff meeting this week, Lisa suggested that I send you a quick email updating you on the following:

1. Fast and Furious. We have a draft response prepared to be sent to Chairman Issa. We need to get it out the door tomorrow -- when OLA spoke with Issa's staff last Thursday, they promised that we would provide documents "within a week" and that week ends tomorrow. OLA feels it's important that we demonstrate that the sending of the subpoena was unnecessary by sticking to our original timeframe. I agree. Our planned production will not involve any physical handover of documents. The responsive documents that have been located are all law-enforcement sensitive, so Committee staff will be invited here to DOJ to view them. I showed them to Lisa briefly this evening and will go through them with her again in the morning. There is one document that I will need to discuss with you. Bill Sullivan from JMD is working on finding a time for Billy Hoover and I to brief Chairman Wolf's staff next week on the challenges faced in gun trafficking investigations generally.

I’m not sure that there is anything responsive to the request or subpoena in the budget doc or the IG report, although we’ll look at that again now. More importantly, however, I think that provision of publicly available docs in response to a congressional request – absent the assent of committee staff – will serve only to anger the Committee. They will perceive it as disrespectful – as the Department handing them only docs they already have – and I don’t believe it will be helpful to us in the short term or the long run. We can, of course, advise staff that we believe that portions of the report are responsive, ask if they want us to provide it, and if not, note that in our letter, but to send these docs (assuming they’re responsive) otherwise will only add to the complexities we face here in my view. “[T]hat what we chose to give them only some publicly available, non-responsive or marginally-responsive documents.”

I think Faith makes a good point. And it’s not just that we will anger the committee or its staff. We also will be giving them an easy target for them to ridicule in a responding letter or other public statement: that what we chose to give them only some publicly available, non-responsive or marginally-responsive documents. I think it’s better to recognize the reality of the situation: that by definition the committee is intruding into law enforcement sensitive territory – and that most responsive material is off-limits open investigative material and the rest is sensitive law enforcement information that should only be made available for review.

“I had made no such assurance about simultaneous receipt of documents.”

Kolan sent this to me before I spoke to him this afternoon. In that conversation I made very clear to him that I had made no such assurance about simultaneous receipt of documents. Rather, I had merely assured him that we would respond to Senator Grassley’s letters as promptly as we respond to any other member.

On Wednesday, April 13, 2011, Senator Grassley sent Attorney General Holder a letter regarding the document review situation.³⁵³ The letter also attached further evidence documenting some of the problems with Operation Fast and Furious.³⁵⁴ The letter stated:

The Department’s failure to cooperate with my requests is especially troubling in light of the February 4, 2011, reply to my initial letter. In that reply, the Justice Department took the position that those allegations were “false” and specifically denied “that ATF ‘sanctioned’ or otherwise knowingly allowed the sale of assault weapons” to straw purchasers. The letter further claimed that “ATF makes every effort to interdict weapons that have been purchased illegally and prevent their transportation to Mexico.” I already provided evidence contradicting that denial in my February 9 and March 3 letters. In addition, attached you will find further documentation undermining the Department’s assertion. Specifically, the documents are emails between ATF officials and a Federal Firearms Licensee (FFL) in Arizona. These emails demonstrate that ATF instructed gun dealers to engage in suspicious sales despite the dealers’ concerns.³⁵⁵

In addition to asking for access to documents, the letter concluded with just one question about the underlying investigation:

Do you stand by the assertion in the Department’s reply that the ATF whistleblower allegations are ‘false’ and specifically that ATF did not sanction or otherwise knowingly allow the sale of assault weapons to straw purchasers? If so, please explain why in light of the mounting evidence to the contrary.³⁵⁶

[T]he government asks these gun dealers to keep selling to the bad guys even after the dealers warned it might end in tragedy.”³⁵⁸ He closed: “I have not exercised my right to object to any unanimous consent request on nominations because of this issue – yet. We discussed the need to identify a senior person within main Justice to head up a document collection/review team and take over this responsibility from ATF. I am of the view that this needs to be done quickly--we also have the apparent crisis of confidence in ATF by Congress. It is my view we need to some strong steps to address these problems. Gary

Here's a draft that reflects Paul's tweaks and a few others in the 3rd para. We've left messages this afternoon for both Castor and his superior, Rob Borden, on majority staff - explaining our serious concern about their conduct here and the prospect of a subpoena to this witness. We also expect that RMM Cummings will talk with Issa about this, noting his concerns and asking that Issa staff consult with us before taking any steps that might impact our investigation. The downside, as Molly pointed out today, is that this letter puts our concerns on the record before we know whether they will back off. Aren't we outing our witness here as a cooperator? Is there a downside to that? We've indicated to staff that he's a cooperating witness but that this info is not public, but we've not expressed that in the record, FOIAble doc. My sense is that Issa is not likely to back down in response to such a demand unless it's accompanied by pressure from others (e.g. leadership and RMM) and we don't have that yet. Not sure we want to pull the trigger now, but we should talk about that.

It is unclear to which specific criminal investigations Mr. Weich is referring. Such a blanket prohibition, if accepted, would conceal the entirety of Project Gunrunner and Operation Fast and Furious from legitimate congressional scrutiny. This is unacceptable. As a co-equal branch of government, Congress has a right, even a constitutional obligation, to conduct oversight of the Executive Branch, including the Department of Justice.

Sometimes, we may take a deferential approach to the Department when we are both investigating a third[] party's wrongdoing. I still disagree. We've made distinctions between F and F and Gunrunner in our letters to Congress. I think we can do the same here. F and F is drawing the attention b/c it is alleged to involve thousands of guns. It's important to knock down the rumors circulating in MX about how those thousands of guns were handled. The handful of occasions that the tactics in question were used in other Gunrunner cases involve onesies and twosies. It's quite different -- distinguishable not just b/c not part of F and F, but in scope as well.

Understanding that Stuart and Tracy have a different view, I think it means that we can't send a letter.

For what it's worth, I believe that the DAG already made the statements about F and F orally to Marisela last week

I defer to the group, but I'm concerned that the last sentence can be read to suggest that Fast and Furious included ♦design[ing] an undercover operation that involves sending guns across the border ♦ (which it did not) and that is why the AG has since made it clear to law enforcement that such things should not happen. That would obviously have the opposite of the intended effect. The key point is to beat back the allegations that F and F involved an undercover operation in MX. Is there any way to move a version of the UC sentence into the paragraph that talks about F and F?

Axelrod and the ATF think that the last line suggests that in FF undercovers were used. I don't agree. They both contend categorically that ♦undercovers ♦ were not used in Mexico in FF and instead want to affirmatively say just that (Matt says it is not in any ROI) - I am hesitant to make sure an assertion at this point regarding FF --- for fear that it might be at conflict with something done in FF (or that Dotson and company say was done) or in another Gunrunner case, for that matter. I'm confirming why he was removed, but the initial indication is that it was for reasons similar to those applicable to Agent Dodson -- unwillingness to work the wire room, unwillingness to work on an investigation where he wasn't the lead agent, etc.

Their antics are truly impacting our prosecutions in several cases, creating (what would otherwise be far-fetch) defenses in our cases, etc.

We are about to unseal the indictment in the Border Patrol Agent Terry case, that accompanies a strategy we have been working w/ Mexico on a wire down there. All this is in jeopardy by what Grassley and Issa are doing, saying and erroneously feeding to their skill at CBS.

Really would strongly recommend the Department take a stand on this.

Would like to talk to you about it. Thx.

Sorry I missed the meeting that was convened earlier this evening. I was co-hosting a happy hour with FBI's Leg shop and ours. I had earlier left messages with Stuart and Lisa to discuss this matter.

I understand that ODAG has directed OLA to draft a short letter to Issa (a similar letter would go to Grassley) proposing a meeting with the AG. That draft is the first of the two attached documents. The second attachment is a longer draft letter conveying our concerns about Issa's activities with greater specificity and referencing earlier correspondence. We think the longer version is preferable.

But while we think a "push back" letter makes sense, we disagree with the strategy of offering Issa and Grassley a meeting with the AG at this relatively early stage of the oversight skirmish, and on the eve of the AG's oversight hearings in House and Senate Judiciary. In an unrelated meeting with the AG late this afternoon I offered him my sense that it would be premature for him to have a face-to-face meeting with these members before we have exhausted other avenues to resolve the dispute. He seemed open to that approach, and asked me to communicate further with Jim and Stuart. I am available to do that anytime tomorrow.

OLA has made a strong pitch that we not offer the AG for the meeting in the first instance because they think it will use up our heaviest tool too soon. We pushed back on the need to have engagement at the highest level of DOJ and they suggested that I do it. That not only holds you in reserve, but has traditionally been a DAG role in protecting law enforcement operations. We pointed out that it would be more powerful for you to be able to say that you have personally offered to meet, but they were unimpressed with the value of that compared to your saying you've asked the DAG to meet with them, particularly compared to the use of you too early.

I told them I'd raise the issue with you. I'm a little torn on how I come out on it. I appreciate the value of holding you in reserve and the risk of lots of other members wanting a meeting with you if this is viewed as a precedent. On the other hand, this is an extreme situation and involves positioning as well as substance, and there may be value in showing how concerned we are about the danger to this pending criminal prosecution and investigation and how out of the ordinary their tactics have been by playing our most important card. In the end I'm not convinced we will do much more than make a record, so on balance I would be comfortable either way.

“It seems unwise to telegraph additional concessions at this point”

Lisa and I just spoke, and I conveyed my final concern that using the phrase “in order to find a way forward” after already saying that we are assembling documents suggests that “the way forward” entails something beyond providing those documents. It seems unwise to telegraph additional concessions at this point and in this letter. So we propose to have that sentence read simply: “We think it would be helpful for you and the Deputy Attorney General to meet to discuss these matters.” The rest would be the same as your draft below. OK?

By the way, as I told Lisa, Grassley’s chief counsel told me in a phone call a short time ago that at the hearing Grassley intends to focus on Gitmo, DOMA and Sentinel rather than ATF. Maybe he’s just throwing me off the trail, but maybe this whole thing is less of a member concern and more of a staff (Jason Foster) concern.

On Monday, May 2, 2011, Attorney General Holder had a conference call with Senator Grassley. The call was scheduled to take place before Holder’s testimony in two successive days of oversight hearings, first before the House Judiciary Committee on May 3, and then before the Senate Judiciary Committee on May 4. According to Grassley: “I personally expressed my concern to the Attorney General about the accuracy of the Department’s replies in our telephone conversation”³⁹² Grassley also raised concerns about whistleblower retaliation and allegations that officials in the U.S. Attorney’s Office for the District of Arizona were intentionally obstructing the congressional investigation.

That afternoon, DOJ sent Senator Grassley a response to his April 14 letter asking that DOJ revisit its position.³⁹³ According to Weich, the Department wanted to memorialize its position before the hearings that week.³⁹⁴ The letter, signed by Weich, stated: “It remains our understanding that ATF’s Operation Fast and Furious did not knowingly permit straw buyers to take guns into Mexico.”³⁹⁵ As Senator Grassley stated later that week: “I was stunned that just a few hours after our conversation, the Department sent another letter repeating the denial in slightly different words.”³⁹⁶

With respect to that letter, the DOJ OIG later concluded:

[B]y the date of its May 2 letter to Sen. Grassley, senior Department officials responsible for drafting the letter knew or should have known that ATF had not made “every effort to interdict weapons purchased illegally and prevent their transportation to Mexico,” either in Operation Fast and Furious or other firearms trafficking investigations, and that the February 4 letter contained inaccuracies. We therefore concluded that the Department knew or should have known that the February 4 letter could no longer be defended in its entirety when Department officials wrote to Sen. Grassley on May 2. . . . Given that senior Department officials’ confidence in the accuracy of the February 4 letter was decreasing rather than increasing as their internal review progressed, we found it troubling that the Department’s May 2 response letter to Sen. Grassley included a substantive statement – albeit a qualified one – regarding the Fast and Furious investigation.³⁹⁷

We believe that the Department should not have made this statement in its May response to Sen. Grassley. Regardless of whether there was any intent to draw a distinction between straw purchasers and third parties, senior Department officials knew or should have known that while ATF may not have allowed straw purchasers to buy firearms so that they themselves could take the guns to Mexico, ATF had in many instances allowed straw purchasers to buy firearms knowing that a third party would be transporting them to Mexico. The review of the Operation Fast and Furious case file that had been conducted by Department officials to this point, including the Title III affidavits, indicated that suspects were buying guns for the purpose of getting them into Mexico. Moreover, ATF was aware from later seizures that some of those firearms did in fact end up in Mexico.³⁹⁸

I would try to avoid having him engage in the specifics. But if pressed, he could say that taking guns to MX is a separate crime. If a straw were to try to cross the border with a gun and ATF knew, they wouldn't let it happen (unless they were coordinating with MX authorities, which happened in a handful of non-Fast and Furious cases). It's a bright line. The question of whether ATF allowed sales to straws will take longer to investigate, since it's not always so clear that someone is a straw rather than a lawful gun buyer.

I agree that we don't need to say anything if the paper does not come back to us. But frankly if we do give a statement, I do not understand why the statement should come from me. I don't think that is appropriate and not what we ordinarily do. I spend an extraordinary amount of time on Mexico for this Department. I have never said no to any request made of me. I do not authorize ATF investigations and the Department knows that. Moreover, it is to the Department's benefit to make clear that the AAG for Criminal, who plays a major role on Mexico matters, did not authorize Fast and Furious.

I had some small edits. I assume that the Q and A about Lanny is where you all ended up? Seems to me a tough answer to give if he gets asked the direct question.

On the morning of Wednesday, May 4, 2011, Senator Grassley made an opening statement at the Senate Judiciary Committee hearing, which stated:

The Department argues that the congressional investigation of these allegations threatened the ongoing criminal prosecutions of straw purchasers. Yet the Department and the ATF chose to wait and watch those same straw purchasers do business for over a year before charging them with any criminal conduct. It was only after the death of Terry that the straw purchasers were finally charged. I take exception to the notion that Congress must hold off on an investigation on the grounds that discovering the truth could hinder prosecutions. . . . Congress should not allow its fact-finding efforts to be stonewalled just because the details might be embarrassing to certain officials in the Department.⁴²⁴

Later, Grassley asked Attorney General Holder whether it could account for the location of 1,318 firearms purchased by fifteen suspects after they had been identified as targets in the Operation Fast and Furious investigation.⁴²⁵ Holder said he was unable to answer the question but would report back to the Committee.⁴²⁶

While I know that this stings, there are two places in the article that make it clear that just because you signed the TIII doesn't mean that you knew any details about the investigation. There is a chance that any response may look too defensive in light of that limitation and raise the stakes. I doubt we could say anything more than is already in the article about how your role is limited in T III signings. I am happy to see what the possible responses are, but I think we need to be careful not to make it worse with whatever we do.

This is not just about Lanny or any one person. Our DAAGs (Bruce, Jason, Mary Pat, Ken and Greg) sign 60 wiretap applications a week in all kinds of case – public corruption, white collar, narcotics and gangs -- and if we don't start correcting the narrative that CRM therefore "approves" each of those investigations, then we as a Department and Division are really in trouble. CRM doesn't approve those investigations any more than does the district judge who signs off on the application and the suggestion that by approving the filing of a wiretap application, we therefore approved the walking of guns into Mexico is harmful not just to the Division, but the Department.

"[T]he suggestion that by approving the filing of a wiretap application, we therefore approved the walking of guns into Mexico is harmful not just to the Division, but the Department."

She added:⁴⁴⁷

Ironically, months ago, when a US Attorney from another district DID solicit CRM's position on whether a load of guns should be part of a controlled delivery to Mexico, it was Lanny who definitively and forcefully told the US Attorney NOT to let that happen.

Again, I'm happy to look at proposed language, but the article does not say Lanny approved the investigation.

DOJ eventually issued a statement on May 4, 2011. It did not mention Breuer. It did, however, state that the operation was approved by the U.S. Attorney's Office for the District of Arizona:

The review process for wiretap applications is a narrow assessment of whether a legal basis exists to support a surveillance request that ultimately goes before a judge for decision. These reviews are not approval of the underlying investigations or operations. As the department has stated, the Fast and Furious operation was approved by the U.S. Attorney's Office for the District of Arizona and the ATF Phoenix Field Office. The investigation was subsequently approved by the multi-agency Organized Crime and Drug Enforcement Task Force (OCDETF) Program.⁴⁵⁰

FINDING: Because of Main Justice's approval of the wiretap applications, officials in the U.S. Attorney's Office in Arizona, including U.S. Attorney Dennis Burke, perceived the Department's public statement regarding approval for Fast and Furious as unfair to them.

The January 2010 memo also notes that ATF agents were advised by Phoenix prosecutors at the time that there wasn't enough evidence to prosecute targets of the probe and that "additional firearms purchases should be monitored and additional evidence" gathered.

The March 2010 Justice Department wiretap approval came from the office of Lanny Breuer, assistant attorney general who heads the criminal division. It was signed by one of his deputies, Kenneth Blanco. The office handles a large volume of such requests and the Justice Department says a wiretap approval doesn't include a review of investigative tactics.

Tracy Schmaler, Justice Department spokeswoman, said the wiretap approvals are "a narrow assessment of whether a legal basis exists to support a surveillance request that ultimately goes before a judge for decision. These reviews are not approval of the underlying investigations or operations."

That day, Axelrod, Hoover, and others met with staff from the House Oversight and Government Reform Committee. In the meeting, Axelrod acknowledged, "I certainly admit there is something to see," and stated that it "looks like there's [a] 'there' there."⁴⁶⁰

1. Blocking Witness Interviews

FINDING: Even after the Justice Department acknowledged Congress's oversight had identified legitimate problems with Fast and Furious, throughout the summer of 2011 Justice Department officials continued to look for every opportunity to limit the information provided to Congress. The documents do not show those officials considering the legal risks the Department created for witnesses who were exposed to subpoenas because of the Department's strategy.

On Monday, May 9, 2011, Senator Grassley announced on the floor of the Senate that he would not cooperate with moving the nomination of James Cole, who had been recess appointed as Deputy Attorney General, until DOJ cooperated with Congress's investigation of Operation Fast and Furious.⁴⁶¹ Senator Grassley stated:

To this day, the Justice Department has still not produced a single page of documents in response to my inquiries and has provided only previously released public documents in response to Chairman Issa. . . . I said on the floor on April 14 that if the Justice Department did not cooperate and provide the information we need, I would consider exercising my right to object to unanimous consent requests on a nomination. Since that time, I have received nothing but stonewalling from the Department. As the chief operating officer of the Department, Mr. Cole is in a position to ensure the Justice Department meaningfully cooperates with my inquiries and complies with my document requests. He has failed to do so.⁴⁶²

Subject: Read-out of my meeting with Chambliss and Grassley staffs re Cole / doc requests:

I met with Kolan Davis (Grassley) and Martha Scott Poindexter (Chambliss) this afternoon. It was a mixed bag. On the one hand they were both in a pragmatic, constructive mode -- we all agreed this is a dispute that can be solved with good faith on all sides. On the other hand, there are remaining asks on both fronts, some of which represent steps backwards from what we thought were each member's position.

Weich further wrote of Senator Grassley's Committee Staff Director Kolan Davis:⁴⁶⁹

On the Grassley front, the good news is that Kolan is no longer asking us to satisfy the laundry list of demands in Grassley's May 16 letter (attached here:)

But he is asking for something more than the letter Leahy offered Grassley. He was vague about what more might be needed - I think he doesn't know what Grassley would settle for, and it is clear that Grassley's price may go down if Chambliss is truly solved and Grassley becomes an obstacle to Chambliss getting his documents. As I have suggested to Matt, I think we should prepare an internal document assessing each of the demands in the 5/16 letter to see if there are some easy ones that we can concede (knowing that we might concede them to Issa/Smith anyway) in order to bring Grassley along.

“[S]ee if there are some easy ones that we can ‘concede’ (knowing that we might concede them to Issa/Smith anyway)”

Weich concluded the email: “Obviously there are still many moving parts. We need to work through each of the issues internally to decide whether we want to make further concessions or not”⁴⁷⁰

On Friday, May 27, 2011, Senator Grassley's office sent Ron Weich a list representing a list of requests that would represent a good faith effort on DOJ's part toward meaningful cooperation with the joint investigation by Senate Judiciary Committee and House Oversight and Government Reform Committee staff into the ATF whistleblower allegations.⁴⁷¹ The list chiefly included documents initially requested by Senator Grassley's February 16, March 4, and March 16 letters, as well as by letter and subpoena from the House Oversight and Government Reform Committee on March 16 and March 31.⁴⁷² Grindler forwarded it to Cole:⁴⁷³

Subject: Call with Steve Castor

Faith and I spoke with Steve Castor earlier today. It was a fairly long conversation. A few items of note:

1. We discussed the possibility of a compromise on the witness interview issue. Rather than do a global protocol, we would start by making an ATF official available who doesn't have/want a personal lawyer. That way, staff would have no problem with us having a DOJ attorney present. As for the transcript issue, we would agree that once the transcript was prepared, the witness and the DOJ attorney would have the ability to review (although not retain) it. We also discussed the fact that we would need to be given a copy at some point down the road because of potential discovery obligations. I strongly think that we should make Bill Newell available next week under this procedure. We'll see how it goes and then reassess.
2. With regard to the documents, Steve said that they were considering having a contempt hearing due to our failure to physically produce any documents that weren't already publicly available. He said that they wanted a DOJ official to come before the committee to explain publicly why the docs weren't being physically produced. On the issue of requiring a Chairman's Letter in order to get the OCDETF reports and Melson briefing books, Steve said they were prepared to send one – but said that the letter would ask for a bunch of other things as well. He said that sending an extensive letter would obviate the need for them to send a new letter every few days. He also said that he was surprised we were forcing them to send a letter, since his past experience was that once an investigation got going, there was generally a good level of informal give and take with the Executive Branch agency. My strong view is that we should simply make the docs available without a Chairman's Letter. As I see it, under the logic that has been employed so far, if Steve had sent use a Chairman's Letter at the beginning of the investigation saying "Produce every shred of paper associated in any way with Fast and Furious," then we would provide these docs because they fit within the request. Seems to me that makes our insistence on a Chairman's Letter a little silly.

I also agree we should get to the Newell interview in order to be on a constructive track with them, but I have a couple of questions:

(1) On the chairman's letter issue, I know there was a chairman's letter at the start of this whole effort by the Oversight Committee, and probably several since. How does the document request in that letter (those letters?) line up against what we are now prepared to give them?

(2) What have we said to Castor about Grassley staff's attendance in these interviews? That seems relevant for two reasons: First, access to these interviews is one of the goodies we're offering Grassley in the negotiation over nominees, and so we should not give it away for free. Second, Castor can't presume to limit the DOJ attendees in these interviews and then bring an uninvited guest on his side. I have already made known to Matt my objection to bargaining away OLA's participation in the interviews.

On Ron's question #1, the recent doc request by staff does not fit within the prior request/subpoena from HOGRC (although it may fit within a prior request from HJC). But, for reasons I express below at the beginning of the email chain, I don't think that is determinative here. If there's concern about precedent, we can always send a cover letter explaining why we're doing it in this instance only.

On #2, we have not addressed the issue of Foster's presence at any interview of Newell. Personally, I disagree that excluding Foster would be the best way to get Grassley to come around -- better to let Foster participate and use it to demonstrate our good faith and willingness to work with him. Also, as I previously mentioned to Ron, we're not bargaining away OLA's presence per se -- we're just agreeing to limit the number of DOJ lawyers. Theoretically, we could send OLA instead of a prosecutor. We're just choosing not to. If we want a deal on interviews, this is an area where we have to give.

On May 31, 2011 ATF personnel gained access to the recovered weapons. A partial list was sent to Phoenix this morning and compared to known purchases in Fast and Furious. At this point it is believed that at least three and possibly seven 7.62 caliber rifles have been linked to Fast and Furious. Two minor things:

1. I’m not sure we should say that DAAGs “must” review and approve T3s (Division’s Deputy Assistant Attorneys General must review and approve electronic surveillance applications for every wiretap sought in every federal criminal investigation conducted by any federal prosecutor) – i.e, that is our internal procedure and not (I think) required by law. I would simply delete the word “must.”

Pope circulated draft language that would later be whittled down:⁴⁸⁹

The review process is limited and specific – it assesses whether there is legal basis (probable cause and necessity) to support the wiretap request. It is not an authorization of an underlying investigation or a comprehensive review of the strategies or tactics to be employed in that investigation. This review of the wiretap request is fundamentally the same review later conducted by a federal district court judge prior to authorizing the electronic surveillance. To the extent wiretaps were sought in Operation Fast and Furious, the applications in support of those wiretaps would have been reviewed by a Deputy Assistant Attorney General before being submitted to a federal district court judge.

By at least in or about March 2010, members of the Criminal Division became aware that ATF and the U.S. Attorney’s Office in Arizona were working on a firearms-trafficking investigation known as “Operation Fast and Furious.” The question refers to a strategy to “allow the transfer of firearms to continue to take place in order to further the investigation.” The quotation appears to be a reference to an ATF Phoenix Field Division briefing paper dated January 8, 2010, which the Office of the Assistant Attorney General for the Criminal Division first received in connection with its response to this QFR. Officials within the Office of the Assistant Attorney General were not aware of this ATF briefing paper and Criminal Division officials did not, at any time, make any operational decisions relating to this investigation.

“[T]he applications in support of those wiretaps would have been reviewed by a Deputy Assistant Attorney General”

He said that the Chairman wants to just send subpoenas and to do depositions. I pointed out to Steve that doing depositions wouldn't get Jason in the room, and since that was the one issue we were discussing, subpoenas wouldn't seem to accomplish much. Steve said that the Chairman was already upset that Steve was going to allow the presence of agency counsel and preferred to do depositions anyway. I asked Steve whether he would hold off serving the subpoenas until the end of the day Monday and he said he would.

FINDING: DOJ officials, including the Attorney General, carefully calculated which documents to release, and to whom. It seems like we hit a nerve here, which I think may be good for current purposes. Grassley holds the key to his staff's full participation in this investigation. All he has to do is allow a vote on our nominees and accept the letter Leahy has offered. It is highly ironic that this staffer is outraged by DOJ interference in leg branch prerogatives when Grassley won't allow the President to staff this key exec branch agency.

"The Department is attempting to resolve its dispute with Senator Grassley . . . over his ability to conduct oversight"

Pat,

The Department is attempting to resolve its dispute with Senator Grassley today over his ability to conduct oversight of Fast and Furious. The attachments consist of docs that we may need to give as part of that resolution. My proposed redactions are visible in red. Please let me know immediately if the provision of any of these docs would compromise your ability to prosecute the indicted case or to continue your ongoing investigation. Also, please let me know if there are any additional redactions that are essential. Thanks.

Faith and Molly – I've told Matt (cc'd) that we are trying hard to hold the line today on process-only concessions to Grassley. But if we need to get into the documents, it's obviously vital to know what the USAO thinks.

Here are the categories as outlined in the Grassley document:

This is very useful to have, but as I just told Matt I don't believe we will need to give up all of this to get our remaining noms confirmed. The meeting Dave and I attended today – and the subsequent GOP cave on Verrilli – lead me to believe that we are on the right track with our process concessions to Grassley. That's what Grassley agreed to before he moved the goal posts, that's what Leahy believes he must agree to again, and I have reason to believe that other Senators (including Chambliss and McConnell) think our position is reasonable. If we have done our job right Grassley is feeling discomfort now.

That said, I very much want to arm the AG with the ability to offer Grassley some specific documents (perhaps A and B below) to sweeten the pot and seal the deal. But there are important reasons for not giving Grassley everything he is asking for: it would embolden him in future fights and would “use up” a lot of material that we will eventually need to release to Issa (soon to be joined by Grassley) as the oversight struggle continues.

I was optimistic that the Department and Senator Grassley would be able to resolve their differences by then. I'm now asking you to please hold off a little longer. My understanding is that some progress was made today, but that an agreement between Senator Grassley and the Department has not yet been reached. I am hopeful that if you can hold off for another day or two, the Department and Senator Grassley will be able to reach a quick resolution and Senator Grassley's staff will be able to participate fully in the interviews. All,

We’ve worked out a plan for the document review process this weekend (and next week). The folks on the “to” line of this email will be participating in the second stage of the review process – in other words, we’ll be looking at docs after a first line review has been completed by ATF lawyers. We’ll be working in teams. Each team will have one ATF/USAO reviewer and one DOJ reviewer. I’ll explain more about the process tomorrow, but for now I need to make sure that we have the right number of bodies available to start the review process tomorrow morning. My understanding is that ATF/USAO will have three people available tomorrow morning at 9:00 AM – Mike Morrissey, Bill Newell, and [REDACTED]. We need three DOJ reviewers for tomorrow at 9:00 AM as well. John Crabb and I are both available, so we need one more. On Sunday, we’ll have four ATF/USAO reviewers – the three from Saturday plus Jim Needles. So, on the DOJ side, we’ll need two bodies in addition to me and John Crabb. Adam, Felicia, and Monica – can the three of you please figure out which one of you can be there tomorrow and which two of you can be there on Sunday?

On Sunday, Paul Colborn and Molly Gaston will begin doing a final layer of OLC/OLA review. They’ll take one final look at each document before it goes out the door (or before it gets held back because of privilege).

Later that day, the House Oversight and Government Reform Committee and the Senate Judiciary Committees published a joint staff report.⁵²⁶ The New York Times published an article on the report, its first article regarding Operation Fast and Furious.⁵²⁷ The article stated:

Some . . . agents blew the whistle to Congress this year after two . . . guns were found at the scene of the murder of the Border Patrol agent, Brian A. Terry. An official with knowledge of the investigation said that neither the bullet that killed Mr. Terry in December nor the casings found at the scene had been linked to the weapons that were recovered there. The online article also linked to a January 28, 2011 memorandum from the U.S. Attorney’s Office for the District of Arizona which confirmed that the purchaser of the firearms recovered at the scene of Agent Terry’s murder had become a suspect in the Fast and Furious investigation over seven weeks prior to the purchase.⁵²⁹ The memorandum had not previously been produced to Congress.

I talked to Matt Axelrod about it. When Grassley's staff pushed for the document, Matt checked with the USAO. The USAO vigorously objected to producing the document even in camera because the document was deliberative and the memo was a memo from the line AUSA to the USA. As a result of this conversation, we advised Grassley and his staff that we could not provide the memo. Matt's assessment is that it is a sensitive nonpublic law enforcement document, but because it is almost entirely factual it is not deliberative.

I just followed up with Drug Caucus Staff Director Eric Jacobstein about Chairman Feinstein's stated desire (on the Record) to hold a FF hearing Co-Chaired by Grassley. Eric said she might be willing to broaden the hearing to "firearms trafficking generally" rather than just FF. He said the timing will depend on the OIG Report. He asked for a sense of when the OIG Report on FF will be completed - the Caucus will time their hearing based on that release, although if the Report isn't going to be done this year they are likely to hold the hearing regardless of the Report release.

Do you guys have a sense of when the OIG Report will be released? Eric would like this information tonight if possible.

We have no idea when OIG will finish its work. Faith, do you think you could ask your contact there whether it will be in this calendar year, as Jill asks below? I certainly assume so. If the Drug Caucus is going to hold a hearing in this area it really should be gun/drug trafficking generally, not F+F, and we should steer them in that direction.

Let us just say it came to our attention that there may have been involvement of other agencies in this. And I was concerned about it. . . . [W]e mentioned it to ODAG on a number of occasions, and somewhat on certain terms of my concern that this whole thing would unravel and make the USG, the government, look a lot worse than it does with what's coming out now. And was kind of brushed off with that until frustration reached the level that, in a monthly meeting with the [Deputy Attorney General], the day after the hearings, I mentioned to him exactly what we knew, so that he would know as to what could be or was happening, for whatever purposes he wanted to use it for.⁵⁵¹

Gary,

We are close to completing the review of approximately 48,000 self-selected documents. Nearly forty lawyers and a dozen ATF agents have been involved in this review process. ATF directed all of its employees, task force officers, and contractors to search for responsive documents. It created close to 7,500 online electronic document vaults to store responsive documents. A total of 697 users submitted information that they self-identified as responsive, resulting in a total of 88,565 individual records submitted. More than half of those records consisted of documents, as opposed to media files (photos, videos, audio files, etc.), that have been reviewed at three different levels. Twenty-nine lawyers conducted the first-level review. Five teams of lawyers and ATF agents worked together to conduct the second-level review. An additional team of two lawyers (one from OLA and one from OLC) conducted the final-level review.

As of June 17, 2011, more than thirty lawyers and ATF agents have started reviewing 124,000 ATF emails and attachments. ATF collected all email of those users who were most likely to have had direct knowledge of Operation Fast and Furious - a total of 278 users. It captured all email from their hard drives, network folders, and reserve tapes dating back to June 2009. Given the large volume of emails, we met with Committee staff and agreed to focus on a subset of nineteen specific users for initial email review. The nineteen users yielded 190 gigabytes of data, which an outside contractor processed for twelve straight days, twenty-four hours a day, using 150 computers, at a cost of $137,000. That process yielded a total of 724,801 emails and attachments - an estimated volume of more than three million pages. After running search terms on the email, the total number of emails and attachments was reduced to approximately 124,000. As with the self-selected documents, we are reviewing emails and attachments in three stages. Approximately twenty attorneys are conducting the first-level review. Five teams of lawyers and ATF agents are starting to conduct the second-level review. Four teams of lawyers and agents will be conducting the final-level review. As of this morning, four of the nineteen user accounts had already been processed through first- and second-level review.

“Nearly forty lawyers and a dozen ATF agents have been involved in this review process.”

“Five teams of lawyers . . . worked...to conduct the second-level review.”

Gary, this email lays out in a bit more detail the reasons that I recommend we not send tonight the proposed letter to the OGR Committee outlining the status of our production.

These types of letters typically are sent when adverse Committee action is imminent. We do not have any reason to believe that adverse action will be taken at tomorrow's meeting. There is no contempt issue on the agenda and the Minority advises us that the majority of the meeting is expected to cover matters on which there is bipartisan support. Matt Axelrod's almost-daily communications with the Committee over the past week regarding document production have been positive and the acrimony on these topics that existed prior to the last Committee meeting has not been in evidence. In short, the Committee seems to accept that things are working more smoothly. Of course, that doesn't mean they won't take shots at us. Indeed, the Committee has on its agenda tomorrow a report on oversight activity, which means that they affirmatively will take shots at us. But, we can respond through Tracy or Matt to whatever specific criticisms are made.

In all, my recommendation is that we save the letter for when we need to create a record to avert imminent adverse Committee action. While I don't think there would be substantive harm in sending the letter now, I also think there is a limit to how often you can send a letter like this as the points typically lose effectiveness when repeated.

For what it is worth, Faith Burton consulted Minority staff this afternoon and their recommendation was also that we not send the letter.

“[T]here is a limit to how often you can send a letter like this as the points typically lose effectiveness when repeated.”

“Faith Burton consulted Minority staff this afternoon and their recommendation was also that we not send the letter.”

⁵⁶⁶ Email from Steven Reich to Gary Grindler (June 21, 2011) [DOJ-FF-44868-70].

Grindler forwarded the email to Attorney General Holder and wrote, “Steven recommends that we not send the letter discussed earlier today.”⁵⁶⁷ He outlined the agenda for the Oversight and Government Reform Committee meeting, then added:⁵⁶⁸

FYI, there are another four or five additional items on the agenda. Steven states that this “activity report” will probably involve criticism of ATF and DOJ, but does mention contempt. One additional fact is that I had thought the letter with the expansive discussion of our document collection and review effort would have also involved a production of documents. That is not the case. A document production took place today and the informational discussion would now be in a letter without any further document production. Also, the committee meeting is tomorrow at 9:30 a.m. not Thursday as I had been led to believe today.

With Steve’s report below and the additional information, I am now convinced that we should not send the letter. Let me know if you agree.

The next morning, on Wednesday, June 22, 2011, Grindler again emailed Holder to seek a decision on withholding a response.⁵⁶⁹ When Holder asked for the basic reason, Grindler summarized:⁵⁷⁰

Reich argues that because a contempt vote is not going to come up today, we need to hold our powder until a time when we may be in greater trouble with the Committee. He says that the conversations with the committee staff since your testimony have improved and that they seem relatively satisfied with the production. I pushed him on the risk of a contempt vote and he feels strongly that the contempt issue will not come up. Also, he points to the apparent fact that the minority staff recommends against sending the letter.

The Reid guy tells me that it is possible the votes will be tomorrow afternoon if Chambliss says OK (he specifically said Chambliss, not Grassley). Per an earlier conversation with Dave, I am going to suggest to Chambliss staff that the quickest way to assure Chambliss that the box contains what we say it contains is for them to come here in the AM to inspect the box. But if she balks at that suggestion and instead asks for us to deliver the box there, I think we need to do that in order to be true to the prior understanding. I see no way we can get screwed at this point. Even if Grassley tried to play games, McConnell and Chambliss wouldn't let him.

Employee Message about Fast and Furious Investigation

(6/29/2011)

The U.S. House of Representative's Committee on Oversight and Government Reform and the U.S. Senate Judiciary Committee are investigating the firearms trafficking investigation known as Operation Fast and Furious. News reports and committee testimony would suggest that ATF is reluctant to provide information on this matter. Be assured that we are working through the Department of Justice to be responsive to all Congressional inquiries. We do so while carefully considering the impact such release would have on the case. Additionally, ATF is also cooperating fully with the independent investigation being conducted by the DOJ Office of the Inspector General into the strategies implemented in this case. These investigations are not a referendum on the exceptional work performed by ATF employees every day. The "Fast and Furious" investigation is just one of nearly 1,500 firearms trafficking cases that ATF perfected in Fiscal Year 2010. We continue to be AT THE FRONTLINE AGAINST VIOLENT CRIME.

I respect the legitimate role that the legislative branch plays in conducting oversight over the executive branch. I am also cognizant of the delicate balance at play when Congress investigates open criminal investigations. With that said, please know that I have a firm desire and resolve to meet with Congressional committee members to address concerns associated with their inquiry. I expect to be afforded that opportunity in the near future. Also know that we welcome the independent review being conducted by the Office of the Inspector General. That review is also ongoing and until it is concluded, it would be inappropriate to discuss those details at this time.

"I have a firm desire and resolve to meet with Congressional committee members I expect to be afforded that opportunity in the near future."

On Friday, July 1, 2011, Stuart Goldberg forwarded the message to Cole.⁵⁷⁹

On Sunday, July 3, 2011, representatives from Chairman Issa's and Senator Grassley's staffs met confidentially with Acting Director Melson for three hours. A transcribed interview with Melson was originally scheduled for July 13 and set to include DOJ and ATF counsel.⁵⁸⁰ However, once Melson became aware of his right to participate in a transcribed interview with his own personal counsel rather than attorneys representing DOJ, he arranged such an interview for the next morning on Capitol Hill.⁵⁸¹

On the morning of Monday, July 4, 2011, the Committees conducted a transcribed interview of Melson. In the interview, he stated:

I am frustrated and disappointed in the way the whole thing has been handled, unfortunately. Of course, this is unfortunately my first experience with something like this with a congressional investigation. But I think the way it was handled went sideways and it could have been avoided with perhaps a more thoughtful approach to what was going on instead of such a strident approach to it. I think there could have been accommodations made between the Hill and ATF and DOJ as to how information was shared. It was very frustrating to all of us, and it appears thoroughly to us that the Department is really trying to figure out a way to push the information away from their political appointees at the Department.⁵⁸²

[M]any of us in the Director's suite were unhappy with the way OLA was handling it. They are a very experienced group of people up there, Faith Burton has been up there for years, and I know she knows the Hill like the back of her hand and we have relied on her and others at OLA, I have for several years, both at ATF and EOUSA when we had Hill interactions. But the feedback I was getting from the Department and other places is that she and Senator Grassley did not necessarily see eye-to-eye on a number of things, so she was very strident in her approach to this and with Senator Grassley.

I sat in Matt [Axelrod]'s office one day when they were writing the letter to Senator Grassley about him being only a ranking member and not the chair of the committee. I sat there across the desk from Matt, as I recall, and said, "This is really just poking him in the eye. What's the sense of doing this? Even if you say you can't give it to him, he's going to get it through the back door anyhow, so why are we aggravating this situation".⁵⁸³

At one point, I had a conversation with Billy about this. And we had decided that we should approach Matt to consider with the other people in the Department whether somebody else other than Faith should head this up⁵⁸⁴

On the evening of Tuesday, July 5, 2011, Chairman Issa and Senator Grassley sent a letter to DOJ regarding Melson’s transcribed interview.⁵⁸⁵ The letter stated:

Acting Director Melson’s cooperation was extremely helpful to our investigation. He was candid in admitting mistakes that his agency made and described various ways he says that he tried to remedy the problems. According to Mr. Melson, it was not until after the public controversy that he personally reviewed hundreds of documents relating to the case, including wiretap applications and Reports of Investigations (ROIs). By his account, he was sick to his stomach when he obtained those documents and learned the full story. Mr. Melson said that he told the Office of the Deputy Attorney General (ODAG) at the end of March that the Department needed to reexamine how it was responding to the requests for information from Congress.⁵⁸⁶

Meanwhile, Weinstein emailed Reich about the October 17, 2010 email (located in this report's Prologue) in which he had discussed Operation Wide Receiver and Operation Fast and Furious and written, "It's a tricky case, given the number of guns that have walked".⁶⁰⁰

Subject: found that email

It's a problem of unclear pronoun reference – in the first sentence, I ask whether Lanny should participate in press when "Fast and Furious and Laura's Tucson case" are unsealed, because we had a litigating role in the latter case. Then when I say in the second sentence that "It's a tricky case, given the number of guns that have walked," the "it" is a reference to "Laura's Tucson case" – that was Wide Receiver, the several-year-old USAO investigation that we were asked to adopt only after the investigation was long over. I then compound the grammatical confusion when I go on to say that "it" is "a significant set of prosecutions," referring to both cases together.

Hope that helps clear it up. Somewhere my HS English teacher is cringing.

It is unclear from Weinstein's email to Reich what caused Weinstein to search for the October 17, 2010 email at this particular time. However, Weinstein also forwarded the email to Amy Pope.⁶⁰¹

1. It is documented in emails (and reflected in the voicemail I forwarded to you) that as Faith and Jason Weinstein worked on the initial response to Grassley, ATF was pressing for stronger denials of the allegation that guns were walked to Mexico.
2. It is documented in emails that in the early weeks following Issa's document requests, Faith was pressing ATF to gather responsive documents and ATF did not do so. Ultimately ODAG needed to send a team of AUSAs to gather the ATF documents because ATF did not or could not do so.

So it's hard to understand how Melson can credibly blame Faith for a lack of responsiveness.

As far as I'm concerned, this is something we can discuss at the 3PM with Faith, but if you don't want to do so let me know.

2. Full Spin Mode

FINDING: In late July 2011, the Attorney General began receiving daily briefings about Fast and Furious, and Justice Department officials worked actively behind the scenes to influence Congress's investigation. For example, Assistant Attorney General for Legislative Affairs Ron Weich attempted to “script” the House Oversight Committee's Democrat staff and urged FBI legislative affairs official Stephen Kelly to provide less information to Senator Grassley's staff but to continue to talk to them “to gather intelligence.”

I have conveyed the points we discussed, including that Lanny's trip to Mexico was not about individual cases, CRM's limited role in approving wiretap applications and the fact that Issa received a briefing that would have contained more info about specific cases than anything Lanny received. But as I said below, the minority staffers are not letting us script them or feed them talking points. They are guarded in their interactions with us. While they know that Issa is over the top and a bully, they also believe that ATF made significant mistakes and they don't easily distinguish between ATF and Main DOJ like we do. They will challenge specific tactics by the majority and will poke holes in unreasonable or premature conclusions, but they don't see the whole effort as a "witch hunt." So we're trying to make common cause with the minority, but they don't see themselves as partners in our effort to tell our story.

Dave, thanks for talking earlier with me and Faith. Just one aspect we wanted to follow up on: it seems likely that Issa will try to tie F+F to Main Justice by suggesting that the Criminal Division was aware of what was going on in ATF's Phoenix office. But in fact, neither AAG Lanny Breuer nor his top aides in the Criminal Division would have learned about the operational details of an investigation the Criminal Division was not leading. Lanny's trip to Mexico was not about specific cases and he would not have discussed cases with his Mexican counterparts. The fact is, Chairman Issa probably learned more about F+F in the briefing he received than Lanny would have received in the course of his duties.

Some suggestions:

AAG Breuer did not know about any of the operational details of, or the tactics employed in, the case known as Operation Fast and Furious, and there is not one shred of evidence to the contrary.

Acting Director Melson and Deputy Director Hoover have both testified that senior DOJ officials at Main Justice did not know the operational details of the case, because they themselves did not know. Deputy Director Hoover specifically testified that AAG Breuer was never briefed about the details of the case.

The AAG of the Criminal Division does not supervise the ATF or the U.S. Attorney's Offices. And the notion that the AAG of the Criminal Division knew more than the ATF Acting Director, the ATF Deputy Director, the ATF Deputy Assistant Director for Field Operations, and the ATF Attache to Mexico about an ATF operation is ludicrous.

“It’s unfortunate that Chairman Issa continues to promote a wild-eyed conspiracy that simply doesn’t exist by selectively releasing small excerpts of transcripts while hiding testimony and other facts his own Committee has gathered. Instead of providing the public with full transcripts of interviews, Chairman Issa has refused to be transparent, lifted partial statements and flatly ignored testimony that refutes his unsubstantiated allegations that senior Department officials approved or even had knowledge of certain tactics being employed in a regional gun trafficking operation in Phoenix. The Department, like the Committee, is interested in getting to the bottom of the serious concerns raised by ATF agents about this operation, which is why the Attorney General has asked the Inspector General to investigate the matter. If Chairman Issa is really interested in an honest, open investigation, we are happy to work with him, but his latest distortions make this entire exercise look more like political grandstanding than legitimate oversight.”

As I just told Tracy, I think we should make clear that this statement responds to the committee report rather than to the hearing, which has largely been about ATF rather than Main DOJ. Here’s an effort to make that clear, and also to adjust the tone:

“The Majority report perpetuates the unsubstantiated assertion that senior Justice Department officials approved this law enforcement operation. Instead of providing full transcripts of interviews, the report includes small excerpts of interviews and ignores testimony showing that senior officials were unaware of tactics being employed in a single gun trafficking operation in Phoenix. Yes – there's some of that now but it doesn't get them much to say we should have known considering they started w. the accusations that we did know.

On the message, they continue the shift away from details of operation to the DOJ muzzling/covering up narrative but that loses credibility now that the underlying conspiracy theory is falling short of the expectations they set. They'll probably keep trying though given the witnesses they have yet to trot out at a hearing – including ATF Leadership - Melson and Hoover. Wouldn't surprise me if they also move to USAO and/or Lanny.

At the meeting two weeks ago, ODAG specifically said that was a good strategy, and in my discussion with you, I apologize but I did not hear that we should not go meet with staff to put off responding to the letter, rather I heard you saying we should not discuss any facts or make any commitments, which we didn't do. We did not bring any substantive people and made clear we were not providing facts. If the Committee has come to you and suggested otherwise, I'm happy to correct things with them. 3. Failure to Correct Record

FINDING: Even after Assistant Deputy Attorney General Jason Weinstein notified the Attorney General’s staff that his initial assessment of Operation Fast and Furious was incorrect, DOJ failed for four more months to correct its misrepresentation to Congress. Instead, Associate Deputy Attorney General Matt Axelrod urged ATF’s congressional liaison to provide only “high level” statements, such as that the congressional investigation “has been a distraction.”

On Thursday, August 4, 2011, nearly six months after Assistant Deputy Attorney General Weinstein reported that Fast and Furious was conducted “thoughtfully, carefully, and strategically,” Weinstein emailed officials within the Office of the Attorney General to notify them that his initial conclusions conflicted with information he had since learned.⁶³⁷

You may recall that back in late February, I was asked to find out what I could about how the Fast and Furious case was conducted, with a one-day turnaround. As you know, I had a phone conference with the AUSA and Crim Chief in AZ and summarized what they said in the email below. As noted in that summary, the information and conclusions were based on what the USAO told me at the time.

Within the past month or so I’ve had the opportunity to review, for the first time, some of the reports from the case. Some of what I have seen in those reports, and some of the testimony from ATF witnesses last week, is in tension with what I was told during that February call with the USAO. I recognize that I still don’t have all of the facts about the investigation, but at a minimum, based on the additional information I have now seen, I would not have reached the same conclusions as I did in that summary.

To the extent you were relying on my earlier assessment, I thought I should pass on that my assessment would be different based on this additional, albeit still incomplete, information.

Faith-

I am trying to track down the response that was actually filed. I want to be clear however, that we did oppose the motion to intervene as being contrary to the CVRA and case law and that such a motion was unnecessary because the USAO had been in contact with the victim's family and had provided them with all information they are entitled to regarding the case.

With regard to the ATF case in Phoenix...we did oppose that motion as well because the Terry family is not a victim as defined by the CVRA. I can track that motion and response down as well. The CVRA, in any event, does not allow a victim to intervene in a case the way they have requested.

"[T]he USAO . . . had provided them with all information they are entitled to"

Thanks – want to make sure that I understand : under the CVRA, victim families are entitled to certain information and to have certain input, which you all are providing to them in the Osorio case, right? If so, is there a written record that you have agreed to their CVRA vic status in that case? I assume that the CVRA does not provide to intervention by victims, but instead affords them certain rights that protected without the need for such intervention and that you all have agreed that they are entitled to those CVRA rights in the Osorio case. Thanks for sending this over. This version wades further than the last version into details and conclusions about Fast and Furious, which strikes us as unwise given the evolving nature of what we're all still learning about the underlying facts and the risk that what you say will be twisted and taken out of context by agency critics. Our recommendation is that any communication of this sort be kept high level -- this has been a distraction, ATF is cooperating with the investigation, and ATF is doing lots of great work in other areas. The last version that was sent over was much closer to this type of high level message than this version is.

She said it is important for OIG's independence that the Department not ask for information on OIG's behalf. She said they feel free to contact congressional committees to obtain information they need -- they don't need our help and are concerned about the appearance of us asking for something on their behalf. I told Cynthia we would be cognizant of that concern in the future.

As I recall, we included that paragraph during the hurried drafting process for this letter as sort of a “gotcha” point since Issa had recently asked us to share certain info with OIG. In retrospect, I think we could have done without it

SUBJECT: Change in Leadership at ATF

“[A] change in leadership is necessary”

As we have discussed, a change in leadership is necessary at the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms, and Explosives (ATF). Both the senior leadership of the Department and the rank-and-file at ATF have lost confidence in Acting Director Ken Melson's ability to lead the agency at this critical and challenging time. This loss of confidence stems from a number of factors involving the management of the agency, including the following.

I was somewhat surprised when the AG said this AM that he expects to have these conversations personally. In other respects Jim has been the face of the Dept leadership on these matters, and there may be a value in keeping the AG a step removed. I didn't argue much against the AG's personal involvement when it was raised this morning, but actually I think the question merits some consideration. My thinking had been that I would have the initial conversation with each of the key staffers based on the attached points, and then could offer member-level conversations with the DAG.

ATF Leadership Change

Why was Melson removed from his position?

This change in leadership was made because it was in the best interest of ATF and its employees who work each day to fulfill a critical public safety mission. This change will allow the agency and its employees to focus on their mission as they move forward under a new leader who brings decades of experience in law enforcement and has a proven record as a strong and steady leader.

What do you mean by the best interest of the agency? Is that a reference to the ongoing congressional investigation into the Fast and Furious operation?

There are ongoing investigations by the Inspector General and Congress into ATF's Fast and Furious operation and I'm not going to prejudge the outcome of those inquiries. It's clear from concerns raised by ATF agents, testimony and other information that this investigation allowed a significant number of guns to get in the hands of criminals. That is of serious concern to the Department, so much so that when these concerns were first raised publicly several months ago, the AG asked the IG to investigate the matter. At the same time, the Department made clear its policy to prosecutors and law enforcement agents working along the Southwest Border that under no circumstances should guns be allowed to cross the border.

In the meantime, the Department has a responsibility to do what is best for the agency and that involved making a leadership change. We talked with Ken and he agreed that his departure would help ATF move forward and focus on its important public safety missions while these investigations continue.

On Wednesday, August 31, 2011, DOJ sent a letter to Issa and Grassley that officially acknowledged for the first time that firearms recovered from the murder scene of Border Patrol Agent Brian Terry were connected with Operation Fast and Furious:⁶⁷⁰

Our original response to QFR 49(a) stated that, as of May 26, 2011, “ATF is aware of eleven instances where a recovered firearm associated with this case was recovered in connection with a crime of violence in the United States.” That answer mistakenly combined the total number of known traces for such recoveries in the United States and Mexico, instead of providing the number for the United States alone, as the Question requested. Moreover, the response included the two firearms recovered at the scene of the tragic death of Border Patrol Agent Brian Terry, even though the Question asked that those firearms be excluded. In fact, beyond these two firearms, ATF is aware of only one instance where a firearm associated with Operation Fast and Furious was traced and coded as recovered in connection with a crime of violence in the United States.

Some of the information about other firearm recoveries related to the case came as news to individuals in the Arizona U.S. Attorney’s Office:⁶⁷¹

Molly and Faith:

We do not want to send this letter until our local ATF agents have gone to the AZ Department of Public Safety (DPS) and read the reports relating to the DPS paragraph on Page 1:

◆ Other than the firearms recovered at the scene of the shooting death of Agent Brian Terry, the single incident reflected in NTC trace data in which a firearm purchased by a target in Operation Fast and Furious was traced with a violent crime code in the United States was traced on May 26, 2011 by the Arizona Department of Public Safety. The firearm was a 7.62mm Romarm/Cugir GP WASR 10. The crime code was ◆ Aggravated Assault on a Police Officer - Gun. ◆ ATF was not able to glean additional details about this incident from NTC trace data or ROIs. ◆

"This event . . . will cause inquiries here in AZ by law enforcement and the press"

We need to know a lot more about this incident regarding the ◆ Aggravated Assault on a Police Officer - Gun. ◆ before we dispatch the letter. This event, as included in the letter, will cause inquiries here in AZ by law enforcement and the press, and we need to know the facts before the letter goes out. ATF will read the reports and we will get back to you as soon as we know something.

However, as the Arizona officials had failed to respond for nearly a day and a half to the request for comment by Main Justice, the response had already been transmitted to Congress.

4. Revelation of Further Justice Department Role

FINDING: Department officials tried to divert attention towards a different ATF operation during the Bush administration—known as Operation Wide Receiver—to politicize the Fast and Furious investigation.

On Thursday, September 1, 2011, DOJ made its final production of emails responsive to the ATF subpoena. That same day, Chairman Issa and Senator Grassley wrote a letter to Ann Scheel, the new Acting U.S. Attorney for the District of Arizona, which stated:

Your office’s recent court filing in opposition to the rights asserted by the family of slain Border Patrol Agent Brian Terry under the Crime Victims’ Rights Act (CVRA) is disquieting. . . . We find it difficult to understand why anyone would oppose the Terry family’s motion on the grounds that there is potentially no connection at all between the case against Mr. Avila and the case against Agent Terry’s murderers.⁶⁷⁵

Looks good to me. My revisions to Steve's are in brown (at least on my screen). I like Steve's insertion of language on the charging decision in the “memos on memos” paragraph. However, I've tweaked the sentence since I'm not positive that every single withheld memo on memo was dated January 25 or later. I also suggest deleting the sentence giving a page count on our memos on memos withholding. Since that category is generally off-limits as a matter of separation of powers, I think giving a page count is an inappropriate accommodation at this point. They have no legitimate oversight interest in that information.

Meanwhile, other leaked documents show that senior Justice Department officials were aware of Fast and Furious in 2010. In addition to saying that he asked the IG to look into the matter, should we also say that he made crystal clear to ATF [and the US Attorneys], through instructions from the DAG, what should have been apparent to them before: under no circumstances should DOJ agencies be allowing guns to walk. In general, I think it's useful for us to push back on the idea that the AG needed to be pushed by Congress on this. Even before the hearings, he made sure that this would not happen going forward and asked the IG to look at what happened in the past. He was out front on this - a point that seems to get lost.

FINDING: The public revelation that Attorney General Holder received memoranda on Fast and Furious in July 2010 sent senior Justice Department leadership into a frenzy, with Holder ordering top Department officials to push back hard. In response, DOJ undertook an aggressive public relations campaign, recruiting law enforcement surrogates to defend Holder.

That day, questions regarding Operation Fast and Furious arose at a White House press conference, including a question regarding Sharyl Attkisson: "When government officials start yelling at you, sometimes it's because they're getting defensive, right? . . . The ATF, the agency that's supposed to stop gun smuggling, turned a blind eye for years, as hundreds of guns "walked" across the Mexican border, CBS News has learned.

In a report on "The Early Show," CBS News investigative correspondent Sharyl Attkisson said a confidential informant has come forward "with a fascinating story of how U.S. agents began letting guns 'walk' across the Mexican border - more than four years ago."

This story is gaining traction. You need to stop it from snowballing -- now. Having unnamed sources in the Department defend you is never going to work. I would suggest an immediate on the record pen-and-pad with all regular DOJ reporters (no interlopers who want to agitate) -- and no cameras -- in your conference room. Then you lay it all out showing that this drumbeat from the Right is bullshit.

“The coverage really did break through . . . of course it was in the NYT this morning.”

I've been giving this a lot of thought today. The coverage really did break through -- the cables all spent time on it, and of course it was in the NYT this morning.

I think you have to personally answer this. Because the charge right now goes to your credibility, the answer has to come from you. The Department can do its defense as well, but you need to be out there defending it. So I would do two things immediately:

⁷⁰⁸ Email from Kevin Ohlson to Eric Holder and Matthew Miller (Oct. 5, 2011) [DOJ-FF-61648-49].

⁷⁰⁹ Email from Matthew Miller to Eric Holder and Kevin Ohlson (Oct. 5, 2011) [DOJ-FF-61647].

“The last time your credibility was directly questioned was whether you had disclosed all of your amicus briefs”

“[Y]ou could find a way to ‘run into’ a couple of reporters on your way to something.”

1. Send a letter to the Hill explaining what happened. Put in context the amount of information you get every week, say that you don't recall reading those bullets or being aware of Fast and Furious at any time before early this year, but in any event, you certainly weren't aware of the gun walking aspect of it until the news broke earlier this year (at which point you took immediate steps to have the IG investigate, etc.). This needs to happen tomorrow. In fact, it should've happened today. The last time your credibility was directly questioned was whether you had disclosed all of your amicus briefs -- the story started to break on a Thursday night, and we made people stay up all night compiling information so we could get a response out by 1 pm or so on Friday.

2. Find a way for you to get in front of a reporter or two about this. You don't want to call a press conference on this because it will blow things out perspective, but if you have any events in the next few days (preferably tomorrow), you could find a way to take two or three questions on it afterwards. Or if that's not easily doable, you could find a way to "run into" a couple of reporters on your way to something. Maybe Pete Williams, Carrie, Pete Yost -- that part can be managed. Most important is that you're in front of a camera in a relaxed manner giving a response you have rehearsed.

It would be ideal if those two things happened in the same day so you didn't have two news cycles of responding -- you want to do it all at once.

“Most important is that you’re in front of a camera in a relaxed manner giving a response you have rehearsed.”

Reading Kevin's advice after I sent mine. I think we agree strategically that you personally need to answer this, and the rest is just tactics (who you talk to, when, etc).

The more I think about the offense versus defense part, I do think you should go on offense, too. After explaining what happened, you could go back at them by saying something like: "But let's be clear what this is all about. I've ordered an investigation into what happened. But there are people on the Hill who don't care about what really happened. For them this has become about scoring political points and weakening an agency charged with cracking down on gun violence. There are a lot of powerful lobbyists and their allies on the hill who have wanted to cripple the ATF for a long time, and they're using this as an opportunity to do so. I'm not going to let them. It's clear the ATF made mistakes here. We've cleaned house, and we're going to fix the agency, but we're not going to allow it to be put out of business by people carrying water for the gun lobby."

This part has to be really carefully crafted and delivered, but I think it could be effective as a one-two punch. (One, explain what happened with your testimony; two, punch back.)

"The whole point of the review is to find things like this and come up with plans for dealing with them."

"It should have been obvious that these memos were going to be a huge target"

If I were you, I would want answers from the entire team (Cole, Reich, on down), on why the Department let Issa decide what to do with these memos. The whole point of the review is to find things like this and come up with plans for dealing with them. It should have been obvious that these memos were going to be a huge target, and instead of just handing them over, the Department should have put them out to reporters on its own terms, instead of letting Issa do it. Give them to Issa at the same time you give them to the press with an explanation that takes the air out of the balloon.

And if the answer is we owe it to Issa to give him this stuff first -- well, that's obviously ridiculous.

- The letter takes a swipe at Issa and other members who have denied ATF the tools it needs to enforce the law. Specifically it criticizes the House vote to block an ATF reporting rule. I know the gun issue is sensitive for you in Vermont, and I'm confident the letter won't put you in a bad position in any way.
- Thank you for all your help on this and so many matters. I know we asked you to join this oversight effort as part of the nominations deal, and there are better things for you and your staff to be doing. But your participation has been important. I think you'll see that this letter gives you some arguments to push back on the irresponsible arguments from the other side.

I talked to Margaret and Tracy and have been deputized to organize surrogates. It's a good role for someone outside DOJ. I'll get with Raben and we'll put together a pool, arm them with info, and get them out there.

⁷⁴⁹ H. Comm. on Oversight & Gov't Reform, Press Release: Oversight Committee Subpoenas Attorney General for Operation Fast and Furious Communications and Documents (Oct. 12, 2011), available at

IX. Postscript: Missing Documents

FINDING: The Justice Department has failed to produce documents for the period from October 11, 2011, to June 28, 2012. These documents cover such key events as the Department's decision to send Assistant Attorney General Lanny Breuer to Congress to testify regarding his involvement, contradicting Attorney General Holder's assertions that knowledge of the tactics "reache[d] into the upper levels of the Justice Department."

Late on the morning of Monday, October 31, 2011, the Senate Judiciary Committee's Subcommittee on Crime and Terrorism released its witness list for a hearing the next morning on combating international organized crime.⁷⁵⁰ The list included Assistant Attorney General Breuer.

Two hours later, the Committee learned that DOJ's Office of Legislative Affairs would make a Fast and Furious document production and provide a briefing on the documents at the end of the day. The documents included emails sent in 2010 by Breuer and his deputies, including Weinstein, regarding Operation Wide Receiver and its use of the tactic of walking firearms. According to the emails, Breuer and Weinstein convened a meeting with ATF leadership regarding the tactic, yet failed to alert others at DOJ.

Although not present at the October 31, 2011 briefing by DOJ legislative affairs officials, immediately following it, Breuer released a statement which read in part:

Knowing what I now know was a pattern of unacceptable and misguided tactics used by the ATF, I regret that I did not alert others within the leadership of the Department of Justice to the tactics used in Operation Wide Receiver when they first came to my attention.

When the allegations related to Operation Fast and Furious became public earlier this year, the leadership of ATF and the U.S. Attorney's Office in Arizona repeatedly assured individuals in the Criminal Division and the leadership of the Department of Justice that those allegations were not true. As a result, I did not draw a connection between the unacceptable tactics used by the ATF years earlier in Operation Wide Receiver and the allegations made about Operation Fast and Furious, and therefore did not, at that time, alert others within Department leadership of any similarities between the two. That was a mistake, and I regret not having done so.⁷⁵¹

As of that date, the Justice Department had produced no emails related to the drafting of the February 4, 2011, letter.

According to the later DOJ OIG report:

Breuer told the OIG that the first draft of his statement to Congress acknowledging responsibility for failing to raise Operation Wide Receiver to Department leadership was prepared by the Office of the Deputy Attorney General, and that he then worked on the statement with his staff in the Criminal Division. He stated that he wanted to “take as much responsibility as I could,” adding that he believed “there was an expectation that I would step up to the plate, and I was willing to do it.”⁷⁵²

Yet at the Tuesday, November 1, 2011 hearing, after asking why Breuer failed to alert any other DOJ officials to the gunwalking in Operation Wide Receiver, Senator Grassley raised the drafting of the February 4 letter.⁷⁵³ Breuer gave the impression that because of his trip to Mexico, the drafting of the letter was not on his radar:

Q. On February 4th, 2011, the department sent me a letter also assuring me that allegations of gun walking were untrue. It reads, quote, “ATF makes every effort to interdict weapons that have been purchased illegally, and prevent their transportation to Mexico,” end of quote. That statement is absolutely false. And you admitted as much last night, that you knew by April, 2010, that ATF walked guns in Operation Wide Receiver. That is . . . correct, yes?

A. Yes, senator. What I . . .

Q. That’s all I need to know, if that’s correct. Did you review that letter before it was sent to me?

A. Senator, again, I just want to be clear that, as I told you a moment ago, I regret that in April of 2010 that I did not draw the connection between Wide Receiver and Fast and Furious. Moreover, I regret that—that even . . . earlier this year that I didn’t draw that connection.

In direct answer to your question, senator, I can say—I cannot say for sure whether I saw a draft of the letter that was sent to you. What I can tell you, senator, is at that time, I was in Mexico dealing with [the] very real issues that we are all so committed to.

But I also regret, as I've said, that I didn't draw that connection earlier.⁷⁵⁴

As discussed above, Breuer was in fact sent multiple drafts of the letter before it was sent to Senator Grassley. Because DOJ has failed to provide any of the communications from the time period surrounding Breuer's testimony, the Committees are unable to assess how premeditated Breuer's misleading testimony was.

Assistant Attorney General Lanny Breuer testifies before the Senate Judiciary Subcommittee on Crime and Terrorism on November 1, 2011 (photo from C-SPAN)

Similarly, on Tuesday, November 8, 2011, Attorney General Holder appeared before the Senate Judiciary Committee for an oversight hearing.⁷⁵⁵ When asked about the wiretap applications approved by the Criminal Division, Holder testified:

I have not seen them. But I do not have any information that indicates that those wiretap applications had anything in them that talked about the tactics that have made this such a bone of contention and have legitimately raised the concern of Members of Congress as well as those of us in the Justice Department. I would be surprised if the tactics themselves about gun walking were actually contained in those applications.⁷⁵⁶

⁷⁵⁵ Oversight of the U.S. Dep't of Justice: Hearing before the S. Comm. on the Judiciary, 112th Cong. (Nov. 8, 2011) (No. J-112-50), available at <https://www.gpo.gov/fdsys/pkg/CHRG-112shrg74542/pdf/CHRG-112shrg74542.pdf>.

Holder's claim of ignorance about the contents of the wiretap applications seems disingenuous. Holder received daily briefings, beginning months earlier on Operation Fast and Furious. He participated in many email chains with his senior management regarding how to communicate about the wiretap applications. And, he managed DOJ's effort to remove ATF Acting Director Melson after Melson testified to Congress regarding the problematic information in the wiretap affidavits.

Further, Holder's stated assumptions about the contents of applications stand at odds with the DOJ OIG's later finding: "We found that the affidavits described specific incidents that would suggest to a prosecutor who was focused on the question of investigative tactics that ATF was employing a strategy of not interdicting weapons or arresting known straw purchasers."⁷⁵⁷ Fully nine months after DOJ failed to gather sufficient information to send an accurate letter to Congress, the Attorney General continued to provide Congress with misleading and unreliable information.

FINDING: The Justice Department has gone to great lengths to withhold the documents that show when the Department became aware of the problems with Fast and Furious and why it ultimately decided when it did to correct the falsehood it had provided to Congress. The Department refused to produce to Congress emails such as Weinstein's raising concerns about DOJ's position, eventually allowing Attorney General Holder to be held in contempt as a result.

On Friday, December 2, 2011, Deputy Attorney General Cole finally signed a letter to Chairman Issa and Senator Grassley withdrawing the February 4, 2011 letter:

As indicated in congressional testimony by senior Department officials on several occasions . . . facts have come to light during the course of this investigation that indicate that the February 4 letter contains inaccuracies. Because of this, the Department now formally withdraws the February 4 letter.⁷⁵⁸

Still, DOJ continued to refuse to provide all the documents that Congress subpoenaed. Ultimately, this resulted in Attorney General Holder, the custodian of the documents and the named recipient of the subpoena, being held in contempt of Congress on Thursday, June 28, 2012.

While DOJ has produced some responsive documents dated through the spring and summer of 2011, it continues to withhold documents that post-date the Oversight and Government Reform Committee's October 12, 2011 subpoena. These documents are key to understanding whether DOJ may have intentionally obstructed the congressional investigation into Operation Fast and Furious. Only when they are produced will Congress fully understand what preparation went into the misleading testimony of both Breuer and Holder, why DOJ finally decided to withdraw the inaccurate February 4 letter, and what evidence of intent to obstruct the Committee's subpoenas may exist between October 12, 2011, and June 28, 2012.

X. Conclusion

DOJ's actions in 2011 with regard to Operation Fast and Furious raise a host of questions about how Executive Branch agencies respond to congressional oversight. Notwithstanding the specific nature of whistleblower allegations conveyed by Congress, DOJ failed to take seriously its obligation to submit to meaningful congressional oversight. Had DOJ treated the allegations with more seriousness, it might have become aware of the problems with Fast and Furious much more swiftly.

As the DOJ OIG concluded, some of the failures in responding to Congress stemmed from a fundamentally flawed process for responding to serious allegations of misconduct. The Committees must conduct further investigation to determine whether DOJ has implemented changes to its process in order to avoid repeating the same mistakes.

Attorney General Eric Holder testifies at February 2, 2012 House Oversight and Government Reform Committee hearing as ATF whistleblower Special Agent John Dodson looks on (House Oversight and Government Reform Committee photo)

Given the questions raised by these documents, the Committees may also need to pursue further steps to better understand the role that individual actors may have played in obstructing Congress. Despite DOJ initially accusing Senator Grassley of “inappropriate political influence” on career prosecutors and law enforcement,⁷⁵⁹ several emails appear to corroborate Acting ⁷⁵⁹ Letter from Ronald Weich, Asst. Att’y Gen., Dep’t of Justice to Charles Grassley, Ranking Mem., S. Comm. on the Judiciary (Feb. 4, 2011).

Director Melson’s allegation that some within DOJ were “really trying to figure out a way to push the information away from their political appointees at the Department.”⁷⁶⁰

DOJ’s defensive focus on self-preservation is all the more unfortunate given its impact on the family of deceased Border Patrol Agent Brian Terry. Whistleblowers put their careers on the line to shed light on the circumstances surrounding Agent Terry’s death. Now, Terry’s family deserves to better understand why the allegations regarding his death were not taken seriously by DOJ.
